Denver Home Ice-Bombed

Mr. and Mrs. James McBride of Denver were sitting in their living room when they heard a crash. A 60-pound chunk of ice had plummeted through the roof of their home and landed in the kitchen. Fire officials on the scene said the ice apparently fell from a plane making an approach to Stapleton Airport.

Coal Miners OK Contract

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — The United Mine Workers union has ratified a new contract for 120,000 coal miners, unofficial returns showed Wednesday, paving the way for an end to a three-week-old strike.

With 65,000 ballots counted, about 80 per cent of the anticipated total, the three-year agreement was approved by about a 56 per cent majority, sources reported.

UMW President Arnold Miller scheduled a news conference in Washington Thursday morning to announce the results. And Miller and coal industry officials planned to formally sign the agreement immediately following his announcement, according to industry officials.

With ratification, most UMW members would be expected to return to work in mines producing 70 per cent of the nation's soft coal on the shift beginning at 12:01 a.m. Monday.

However, some industry officials said it is possible that some mines could be reopened earlier, but added that would depend on the union.

The return to work would end a strike which began Nov. 12 and has forced the layoff of more than 25,000 workers in coal consuming or transporting industries.

The agreement with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association provides for a 64 per cent increase in benefits and wages over three years.

Wages, ranging from $42 to $50 a day in the last year of the old contract, would go up 10 per cent in the first year of the new pact and a cost of living increase would be figured quarterly.

It also would provide for the union's first sick leave, increase from 20 to 30 the number of paid holidays and vacation days and greatly improve pension benefits.

The return to work could be affected by negotiations still going on between the UMW and the Association of Bituminous Contractors, whose members do construction work for the coal industry.

Should that contract not be settled, workers covered by that contract could conceivably picket coal mines and keep them from opening.

However, the coal operators could be expected to exert pressure on the contractors for a rapid agreement. And sources in Washington reported that progress was being made and a settlement could come this week.

There had been expectations that two districts — No. 6 in Ohio and No. 29 in southern West Virginia — would produce a strong vote against the contract.

But Washington sources reported that the vote in District 29, home of an organized campaign against ratification, was running about 50-50. And John Guzek, District 6 President, said his district probably would do about the same.

Chambers Threatens To Oppose Vitek

By The Associated Press

State Sen. Ernest Chambers will try to block confirmation of Joseph Vitek as director of correctional services, unless Vitek removes two controversial employes from their posts at the Nebraska Penal Complex.

Chambers said he would organize opposition to Vitek's confirmation unless Complex Warden Robert Parratt and Director of Education Edith Whiting were replaced.

Vitek was enroute to Chicago Wednesday night, but his office released a prepared statement which said Mrs. Whiting had resigned, effective July 17, 1975. The resignation was submitted Wednesday, Vitek's office said.

Chambers said Vitek had informed him Wednesday that Mrs. Whiting would remain on the payroll until next July, but did not mention the resignation.

Whiting Lies Said

Chambers contends Mrs. Whiting lied to a Judiciary committee hearing, and should be fired at once. She also has been accused of being "autocratic" in her administration of the education program over the past 12 years.

Chambers said Vitek waived educational requirements in order to give Parratt, a long-time corrections employe, the warden's spot.

Chambers said members of the Judiciary Committee considered the situation serious enough to warrant a special meeting. "We will consider this, and other things, before the Legislature convenes" Jan. 8, Chambers said.

Mrs. Whiting has been incapacitated and on sick leave since shortly before she was scheduled to make a second appearance before the committee this fall, Chambers said.

Chambers had written to Vitek and recommended Mrs. Whiting's dismissal, after examining transcripts of her testimony. He was informally assigned that task by the Judiciary Committee.

Qualifications Changed

Chambers said Vitek changed qualifications for the warden's job so Parratt could have the spot. Chambers said the requirements called for a college degree, and Parratt doesn't have a high school diploma.

The Parratt appointment also has been questioned by State Sen. Wally Barnett, who said if the requirements were not enforced, they should be eliminated.

Chamber's said Mrs. Whiting's continued employment and the Parratt appointment had demoralized state employes.

"If these decisions stand, and they typify his (Vitek's) attitude toward corrections," Chambers said, then he would be obligated to organize opposition to Vitek's confirmation.

"I lay this whole thing on the doorstep of Gov. (J. James) Exon," Chambers said. He said Mrs. Whiting "must have something on someone politically," and that Vitek was not being allowed to fire her.

Dismissal Refused

Chambers said Vitek told him he had not dismissed Mrs. Whiting over her alleged lies to the Judiciary Committee because she was sick at the time she testified.

Mrs. Whiting had declined to give specific information about her educational background, specifically where she received a master's degree, because, she said, it would put her life in danger. Mrs. Whiting is a native of Austria.

Chambers said Mrs. Whiting wrecked the education department at the prison, and that a study done by the State Education Department proved that.

Price Tag On Prison Plan Is $32 Million

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

A team of state penal experts has proposed a ten-year plan for upgrading Nebraska's prisons featuring $22.1 million in capital construction and nearly $10 million in new programs.

The 75-page document, released Wednesday, calls for a new $10 million Men's Reformatory, new cellblocks costing $3 million at the Penitentiary and treatment instead of imprisonment for selected offenders prior to trial.

An eight-member committee, headed by State Corrections Director Joseph Vitek, submitted the report to the Legislature's Executive Board as directed by a 1974 law.

Long-Range Plans

The plan for the first time lays out the administration's long-range plans. In essence, many of the recommendations in the plan follow ones made recently in a year-long study by the Nebraska advisory committee to the U.S. Civil Rights Commission.

The plan does not go into depth on sources of funding for the work. Presumably, it would be a mix of federal and state general fund support.

In the 10-year plan, Vitek said, "This document is not to be mistaken as a panacea for all of the state's correctional woes. It is intended to provide an important step in the right direction."

It will now be up to the Legislature and Gov. J. James Exon to decide what portions of the plan will become reality.

Recent legislative sessions have produced disagreements between Exon and the Legislature and among senators themselves as to how the state should proceed in penal reform. As a result, some of the 10-year plan's recommendations have been suggested in the past but have failed to become law.

Fair Chance Seen

Some legislative observers speculate there is a fair chance the impasse will be broken in the 1975 Unicameral.

Much of the debate has centered around construction of new facilities. The two major items which State Fire Marshal Joseph Pluta said need to be replaced are the Men's Reformatory and the Penitentiary's east and west cellblocks.

The Reformatory, a six building complex for young first offenders, dates back to World War I and presents "a direct danger to the safety, health and welfare of inmates and society."

Built in 1874

The cellhouses at the Pentitentiary were built in 1874. The cells contain 57 square feet of living space per inmate; national standards suggest a minimum of 80 square feet per inmate.

The plan envisions a new Men's Reformatory having 160,510 square feet for 350 inmates costing $10.3 million (the current capacity is 300.) The plan suggests it be located on the present site and ready for occupancy during fiscal 1978. In the past, some senators have favored locating the Reformatory in Omaha.

The new east and west cellhouses at the Penitentiary would be completed in fiscal 1979 and accommodate 300 inmates, according to the plan. In addition, the administration building would be replaced and the dormitory for trusted inmates would be remodeled.

At the Center for Women at York, the plan provides for a new 16-bed cottage and renovation of west hall. No major construction is planned for the Youth Development Centers at Kearney and Geneva.

10 Recommendations

In terms of programs, the plan includes 19 recommendations in the areas of community corrections, juvenile programs and parole. Those include:

—establishing a statewide treatment program for misdemeanors — involving alcohol and drugs. The plan said drunkenness and alcohol-related offenses account for the bulk of arrests in Nebraska.

—starting a pilot community corrections program to remove certain offenders from the criminal justice system and provide reasonable alternatives to jail.

In its statement of tenets, the plan said: "The alcoholic, the incompetent, the juvenile offender, selected sex offenders and selected drug abusers can be more appropriately treated elsewhere in the community than in jail. Additionally, victimless crimes need to be decriminalized. This practice of incarcerating indigents (for) their inability to pay fines should be halted."

Under this community-based program, the selected offender would be released prior to trial for treatment and under supervision.

—a state jail standards division under the department. Jail conditions vary from county to county; the division would enforce uniform standards.

—a study to determine whether the age limits for juvenile offenders needs to be changed. More and more inmates at the two Youth Development Centers have committed serious felonies, the plan said. This makes rehabilitation of less serious offenders more difficult, it said.

—improvement of medical services at the Penal Complex in Lincoln and additional training for guards.

—legislation requiring a hearing before parole is revoked and allowing the Parole Board to parole offenders serving one-year sentences at any time.

—minimum base salary for sheriffs.

—increased the amount an inmate is paid upon release from $30 to $100.

Goal Of Chambers: Ft. Robinson Return

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha said Wednesday he will introduce legislation in the 1975 Unicameral to give Fort Robinson State Park to the Indians.

Chambers said a Sioux Indian spokesman from Gordon has requested him to sponsor such a bill, and he has agreed to do so.

It is his understanding, Chambers said, that the land in Sioux and Dawes Counties belongs to the Indians under the terms of their century-old treaty with the U.S. Government.

Chambers, interviewed at his desk during Wednesday's meeting of the Legislative Council, is currently studying the 1868 treaty and historical background related to the issue.

'Lost Cause?'

"I suppose this is another one of 'the lost causes' which people tend to bring to me when everything else has been tried," Chambers said.

"But I am going to undertake it not only because the Indians are entitled to have someone present their views in government, but also because it deals with the fundamental principle of whether the United States of America is honor-bound to keep its word."

Fort Robinson, where Chief Crazy Horse was killed in 1877, has long been a focal point for Indian concern.

A hearing on the validity of the treaty has been scheduled in U.S. District Court before Judge Warren Urbom later this month, and his subsequent ruling on the issue "may be significant" in determining the outcome of his legislation, Chambers noted.

Chambers' views were solicited during a meeting of state senators and senators-elect to hear reports from legislative study committees.

Leadership Posts

More attention was devoted to private discussions about leadership posts in the 1975 session than to the reports.

Sens. Harold Simpson of Lincoln and Jules Burbach of Crofton appear to have emerged as the leading candidates for the Speakership.

The hopes of the third announced candidate, Sen. Leslie Stull of Alliance, appear to rely largely on development of a deadlock between Simpson and Burbach.

A fourth prospect, Sen. Herb Duis of Gothenburg, was viewed more predominantly as a possibility for the chairmanship of the Banking, Commerce and Insurance Committee.

Marvel Bid Settled

Meanwhile, it was understood, Sen. Richard Marvel of Hastings has firmly settled on a bid to seek re-election as chairman of the Appropriations Committee. For a time, he was being boosted as a possible chairman of the Legislative Council executive board.

Sen. Eugene Mahoney of Omaha appeared to be the likely choice to continue to head the executive board.

A Burbach-Simpson showdown would feature two senators who have almost won the Speaker's post in the past. Simpson finished a close second in 1973, and Burbach came within two votes of winning in 1971.

If Burbach were to win, he would be the first Democrat chosen for the job in more than two decades — since 1963, to be exact.

'Uphill Struggle'

Chambers said he knows his Fort Robinson proposal "will be an uphill struggle."

But, he said, "substantial human rights are involved, as well as the integrity of a government."

Those factors "justify the effort," he said.

Chambers plans to travel to Gordon to talk with Indians about the matter.

"If the treaty is valid, then it must be legally binding," he declared.

Nixon Offered Money To 2 Departing Aides

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon offered to make $200,000 or $300,000 available to H.R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman for legal and family expenses when they were leaving the White House, the Watergate cover-up jury was told Wednesday.

"No strain," Nixon said. The money "doesn't come outta me."

Assistant Prosecutor Richard Ben-Veniste disclosed the offer and asked whether the money would somehow be "provided by persons who were given favored treatment over the years."

"I can recall a general conversation like that," Haldeman said.

In a transcript of the tape recorded conversation, Nixon says "I never intended to use the money at all."

He said he had told his friend Charles G. "Bebe" Rebozo to "be sure that people ... who have contributed money over the contributing years are favored ... and he's used it for the purpose of getting things out, paid for in check and all that sort of thing."

The "it" in that conversation apparently referred to the fund Nixon had mentioned.

Haldeman and Ehrlichman, both defendants in the Watergate cover-up trial, resigned as Nixon's top aides on April 30, 1973. The first conversation about money was on April 17 that year, with Nixon saying:

"I know the problems with families and all the rest. Just let me handle it."

Haldeman, still on the witness stand after four days, admitted the offer was made several times but said he and Ehrlichman didn't accept it. He said he resented the implication that was being left with the jury.

Ben-Veniste then read from a transcript of the April 17 conversation, part of it inaudible. The jury had not heard the tape of that conversation and it had not been made public previously.

"Let me ask you this," Nixon said. "Legal fees will be substantial ... but there is a way we can get it to you and — two or three hundred thousand dollars ... I know the problems with families and all the rest. Just let me handle it."

Ehrlichman replied, "Let's wait and see if it's necessary," but Nixon persisted:

"You will find that you have to do it in cash ... that you got a civic, you got a government duty."

Eight days later, on April 25, Nixon raised the point again.

"Let me ask you this," he said in a conversation with Haldeman and Ehrlichman. "Is there any way you can use cash?"

Ehrlichman: "I don't think so."

Haldeman: "I don't think so."

Nixon then said there was "as much, I think as 200 (thousand dollars) there's available in '74 campaign already."

At the trial, Ben-Veniste asked Haldeman what it was that compounded the problem — whether it was "all the money paid to the defendants over the year?"

Haldeman answered, "No sir, that's not true."

The cross-examination will be finished Thursday, and Ehrlichman's lawyers will begin to put on their defense.

Ben-Veniste said he had brought up the money offer to the two men because it "tends to show there was an agreement" that Nixon, Haldeman and Ehrlichman would all protect each other. Nixon is an unindicted co-conspirator in the case.

Questioned by U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica about the materiality of bringing up that conversation, Ben-Veniste said that under the agreement "Haldeman went up to the Senate Select (Watergate) committee and continued the cover-up."

He said it tended to show that the Haldeman and Ehrlichman knew Nixon would "help them financially if they needed it."

It brought protests from both defendants' lawyers and Ben-Veniste said "I never said it was accepted ... they all understood it in this context."

At that point Haldeman spoke up and said that "it seems to me a highly unsavory connotation" had been raised.

He said the offer was in a conversation two days after Nixon had been told by Asst. Atty. Gen. Henry E. Petersen that the Justice Department felt it had "information embarassing to Mr. Ehrlichman and me if it came out."

"The President did discuss that with us and as a result suggested we retain legal counsel," Haldeman said.

Haldeman said the offer of help for legal fees came after he and Ehrlichman hired lawyers the same day.

Senate Panel Reports 'No Bar' To Rockefeller

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Rules Committee declared Wednesday that its probe of Vice President-designate Nelson A. Rockefeller turned up "no bar or impediment which would disqualify him," even though he displayed poor judgment at times.

The committee already had voted 9 to 0 on Nov. 23 to recommend full Senate approval next Tuesday, but its formal report nonetheless raised several questions it said should be considered before the final tally.

The greatest of all, it said, is the implication raised "in the potential wedding of great wealth and business interests with great political power, the totality of which has been unmatched."

The House Judiciary Committee, meanwhile, continued its own hearings on the other side of the Capitol and heard Rockefeller's brother Laurance disclose yet another loan made at Nelson's initiative.

Laurance S. Rockefeller said he advanced $30,000 to William Miller, then the national Republican chairman, in 1961.

"Since I did not know Mr. Miller, and since Nelson did, I can only assume that I loaned him the money at Nelson's suggestion," he said.

Neither Rockefeller had mentioned the Miller loan in the earlier Senate hearings, and Rep. Jerome Waldie, D-Calif., declared the disclosure "symbolic of the trouble we've had" in the investigations.

"The only way we get the truth is by probing, prodding, and insisting," Waldie said.

Laurance Rockefeller said he had no direct memory of the loan, which was paid back in three years by Miller, and had discovered records of it after the Senate hearings were completed.

Chairman Peter Rodino, D-N.J., of the House committee said Nelson Rockefeller would be recalled as a witness Thursday in what he hopes will be the final day of hearings. He tentatively plans a committee vote next Tuesday, the same day of the confirmation roll call in the Senate.

Coal Miners OK Contract

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — The United Mine Workers union has ratified a new contract for 120,000 coal miners, unofficial returns showed Wednesday, paving the way for an end to a three-week-old strike.

With 65,000 ballots counted, about 80 per cent of the anticipated total, the three-year agreement was approved by about a 56 per cent majority, sources reported.

UMW President Arnold Miller scheduled a news conference in Washington Thursday morning to announce the results. And Miller and coal industry officials planned to formally sign the agreement immediately following his announcement, according to industry officials.

With ratification, most UMW members would be expected to return to work in mines producing 70 per cent of the nation's soft coal on the shift beginning at 12:01 a.m. Monday.

However, some industry officials said it is possible that some mines could be reopened earlier, but added that would depend on the union.

The return to work would end a strike which began Nov. 12 and has forced the layoff of more than 25,000 workers in coal consuming or transporting industries.

The agreement with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association provides for a 64 per cent increase in benefits and wages over three years.

Wages, ranging from $42 to $50 a day in the last year of the old contract, would go up 10 per cent in the first year of the new pact and a cost of living increase would be figured quarterly.

It also would provide for the union's first sick leave, increase from 20 to 30 the number of paid holidays and vacation days and greatly improve pension benefits.

The return to work could be affected by negotiations still going on between the UMW and the Association of Bituminous Contractors, whose members do construction work for the coal industry.

Should that contract not be settled, workers covered by that contract could conceivably picket coal mines and keep them from opening.

However, the coal operators could be expected to exert pressure on the contractors for a rapid agreement. And sources in Washington reported that progress was being made and a settlement could come this week.

There had been expectations that two districts — No. 6 in Ohio and No. 29 in southern West Virginia — would produce a strong vote against the contract.

But Washington sources reported that the vote in District 29, home of an organized campaign against ratification, was running about 50-50. And John Guzek, District 6 President, said his district probably would do about the same.

Chambers Threatens To Oppose Vitek

By The Associated Press

State Sen. Ernest Chambers will try to block confirmation of Joseph Vitek as director of correctional services, unless Vitek removes two controversial employes from their posts at the Nebraska Penal Complex.

Chambers said he would organize opposition to Vitek's confirmation unless Complex Warden Robert Parratt and Director of Education Edith Whiting were replaced.

Vitek was enroute to Chicago Wednesday night, but his office released a prepared statement which said Mrs. Whiting had resigned, effective July 17, 1975. The resignation was submitted Wednesday, Vitek's office said.

Chambers said Vitek had informed him Wednesday that Mrs. Whiting would remain on the payroll until next July, but did not mention the resignation.

Whiting Lies Said

Chambers contends Mrs. Whiting lied to a Judiciary committee hearing, and should be fired at once. She also has been accused of being "autocratic" in her administration of the education program over the past 12 years.

Chambers said Vitek waived educational requirements in order to give Parratt, a long-time corrections employe, the warden's spot.

Chambers said members of the Judiciary Committee considered the situation serious enough to warrant a special meeting. "We will consider this, and other things, before the Legislature convenes" Jan. 8, Chambers said.

Mrs. Whiting has been incapacitated and on sick leave since shortly before she was scheduled to make a second appearance before the committee this fall, Chambers said.

Chambers had written to Vitek and recommended Mrs. Whiting's dismissal, after examining transcripts of her testimony. He was informally assigned that task by the Judiciary Committee.

Chambers said Vitek changed qualifications for the warden's job so Parratt could have the spot. Chambers said the requirements called for a college degree, and Parratt doesn't have a high school diploma.

The Parratt appointment also has been questioned by State Sen. Wally Barnett, who said if the requirements were not enforced, they should be eliminated.

Chamber's said Mrs. Whiting's continued employment and the Parratt appointment had demoralized state employes.

"If these decisions stand, and they typify his (Vitek's) attitude twoard corrections," Chambers said, then he would be obligated to organize opposition to Vitek's confirmation.

"I lay this whole thing on the doorstep of Gov. (J. James) Exon," Chambers said. He said Mrs. Whiting "must have something on someone politically," and that Vitek was not being allowed to fire her.

Dismissal Refused

Chambers said Vitek told him he had not dismissed Mrs. Whiting over her alleged lies to the Judiciary Committee because she was sick at the time she testified.

Mrs. Whiting had declined to give specific information about her educational background, specifically where she received a master's degree, because, she said, it would put her life in danger. Mrs. Whiting is a native of Austria.

Chambers said Mrs. Whiting wrecked the education department at the prison, and that a study done by the State Education Department proved that.

Price Tag On Prison Plan Is $32 Million

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

A team of state penal experts has proposed a ten-year plan for upgrading Nebraska's prisons featuring $22.1 million in capital construction and nearly $10 million in new programs.

The 75-page document, released Wednesday, calls for a new $10 million Men's Reformatory, new cellblocks costing $3 million at the Penitentiary and treatment instead of imprisonment for selected offenders prior to trial.

An eight-member committee, headed by State Corrections Director Joseph Vitek, submitted the report to the Legislature's Executive Board as directed by a 1974 law.

Long-Range Plans

The plan for the first time lays out the administration's long-range plans. In essence, many of the recommendations in the plan follow ones made recently in a year-long study by the Nebraska advisory committee to the U.S. Civil Rights Commission.

The plan does not go into depth on sources of funding for the work. Presumably, it would be a mix of federal and state general fund support.

In the 10-year plan, Vitek said, "This document is not to be mistaken as a panacea for all of the state's correctional woes. It is intended to provide an important step in the right direction."

It will now be up to the Legislature and Gov. J. James Exon to decide what portions of the plan will become reality.

Recent legislative sessions have produced disagreements between Exon and the Legislature and among senators themselves as to how the state should proceed in penal reform. As a result, some of the 10-year plan's recommendations have been suggested in the past but have failed to become law.

Fair Chance Seen

Some legislative observers speculate there is a fair chance the impasse will be broken in the 1975 Unicameral.

Much of the debate has centered around construction of new facilities. The two major items which State Fire Marshal Joseph Pluta said need to be replaced are the Men's Reformatory and the Penitentiary's east and west cellblocks.

The Reformatory, a six building complex for young first offenders, dates back to World War I and presents "a direct danger to the safety, health and welfare of inmates and society."

Built In 1874

The cellhouses at the Pentitentiary were built in 1874. The cells contain 57 square feet of living space per inmate; national standards suggest a minimum of 80 square feet per inmate.

The plan envisions a new Men's Reformatory having 160,510 square feet for 350 inmates costing $10.3 million (the current capacity is 300.) The plan suggests it be located on the present site and ready for occupancy during fiscal 1978. In the past, some senators have favored locating the Reformatory in Omaha.

The new east and west cellhouses at the Penitentiary would be completed in fiscal 1979 and accommodate 300 inmates, according to the plan. In addition, the administration building would be replaced and the dormitory for trusted inmates would be remodeled.

At the Center for Women at York, the plan provides for a new 16-bed cottage and renovation of west hall. No major construction is planned for the Youth Development Centers at Kearney and Geneva.

19 Recommendations

In terms of programs, the plan includes 19 recommendations in the areas of community corrections, juvenile programs and parole. Those include:

—establishing a statewide treatment program for misdemeanors — involving alcohol and drugs. The plan said drunkenness and alcohol-related offenses account for the bulk of arrests in Nebraska.

—starting a pilot community corrections program to remove certain offenders from the criminal justice system and provide reasonable alternatives to jail.

In its statement of tenets, the plan said:

"The alcoholic, the incompetent, the juvenile offender, selected sex offenders and selected drug abusers can be more appropriately treated elsewhere in the community than in jail. Additionally, victimless crimes need to be decriminalized. This practice of incarcerating indigents (for) their inability to pay fines should be halted."

Under this community-based program, the selected offender would be released prior to trial for treatment and under supervision.

—a state jail standards division under the department. Jail conditions vary from county to county; the division would enforce uniform standards.

—a study to determine whether the age limits for juvenile offenders needs to be changed. More and more inmates at the two Youth Development Centers have committed serious felonies, the plan said. This makes rehabilitation of less serious offenders more difficult, it said.

—improvement of medical services at the Penal Complex in Lincoln and additional training for guards.

—legislation requiring a hearing before parole is revoked and allowing the Parole Board to parole offenders serving one-year sentences at any time.

—minimum base salary for sheriffs.

—increased the amount an inmate is paid upon release from $30 to $100.

Goal Of Chambers: Ft. Robinson Return

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha said Wednesday he will introduce legislation in the 1975 Unicameral to give Fort Robinson State Park to the Indians.

Chambers said a Sioux Indian spokesman from Gordon has requested him to sponsor such a bill, and he has agreed to do so.

It is his understanding, Chambers said, that the land in Sioux and Dawes Counties belongs to the Indians under the terms of their century-old treaty with the U.S. Government.

Chambers, interviewed at his desk during Wednesday's meeting of the Legislative Council, is currently studying the 1868 treaty and historical background related to the issue.

'Lost Cause?'

"I suppose this is another one of 'the lost causes' which people tend to bring to me when everything else has been tried," Chambers said.

"But I am going to undertake it not only because the Indians are entitled to have someone present their views in government, but also because it deals with the fundamental principle of whether the United States of America is honor-bound to keep its word."

Fort Robinson, where Chief Crazy Horse was killed in 1877, has long been a focal point for Indian concern.

A hearing on the validity of the treaty has been scheduled in U.S. District Court before Judge Warren Urbom later this month, and his subsequent ruling on the issue "may be significant" in determining the outcome of his legislation, Chambers noted.

Chambers' views were solicited during a meeting of state senators and senators-elect to hear reports from legislative study committees.

Leadership Posts

More attention was devoted to private discussions about leadership posts in the 1975 session than to the reports.

Sens. Harold Simpson of Lincoln and Jules Burbach of Crofton appear to have emerged as the leading candidates for the Speakership.

The hopes of the third announced candidate, Sen. Leslie Stull of Alliance, appear to rely largely on development of a deadlock between Simpson and Burbach.

A fourth prospect, Sen. Herb Duis of Gothenburg, was viewed more predominantly as a possibility for the chairmanship of the Banking, Commerce and Insurance Committee.

Marvel Bid Settled

Meanwhile, it was understood, Sen. Richard Marvel of Hastings has firmly settled on a bid to seek re-election as chairman of the Appropriations Committee. For a time, he was being boosted as a possible chairman of the Legislative Council executive board.

Sen. Eugene Mahoney of Omaha appeared to be the likely choice to continue to head the executive board.

A Burbach-Simpson showdown would feature two senators who have almost won the Speaker's post in the past. Simpson finished a close second in 1973, and Burbach came within two votes of winning in 1971.

If Burbach were to win, he would be the first Democrat chosen for the job in more than two decades — since 1963, to be exact.

'Uphill Struggle'

Chambers said he knows his Fort Robinson proposal "will be an uphill struggle."

But, he said, "substantial human rights are involved, as well as the integrity of a government."

Those factors "justify the effort," he said.

Chambers plans to travel to Gordon to talk with Indians about the matter.

Nixon Offered Money To 2 Departing Aides

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon offered to make $200,000 or $300,000 available to H.R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman for legal and family expenses when they were leaving the White House, the Watergate cover-up jury was told Wednesday.

"No strain," Nixon said. The money "doesn't come outta me."

Assistant Prosecutor Richard Ben-Veniste disclosed the offer and asked whether the money would somehow be "provided by persons who were given favored treatment over the years."

"I can recall a general conversation like that," Haldeman said.

In a transcript of the tape recorded conversation, Nixon says "I never intended to use the money at all."

He said he had told his friend Charles G. "Bebe" Rebozo to "be sure that people ... who have contributed money over the contributing years are favored ... and he's used it for the purpose of getting things out, paid for in check and all that sort of thing."

The "it" in that conversation apparently referred to the fund Nixon had mentioned.

Haldeman and Ehrlichman, both defendants in the Watergate cover-up trial, resigned as Nixon's top aides on April 30, 1973. The first conversation about money was on April 17 that year, with Nixon saying:

"I know the problems with families and all the rest. Just let me handle it."

Haldeman, still on the witness stand after four days, admitted the offer was made several times but said he and Ehrlichman didn't accept it. He said he resented the implication that was being left with the jury.

Ben-Veniste then read from a transcript of the April 17 conversation, part of it inaudible. The jury had not heard the tape of that conversation and it had not been made public previously.

"Let me ask you this," Nixon said. "Legal fees will be substantial ... but there is a way we can get it to you and — two or three hundred thousand dollars ... I know the problems with families and all the rest. Just let me handle it."

Ehrlichman replied, "Let's wait and see if it's necessary," but Nixon persisted:

"You will find that you have to do it in cash ... that you got a civic, you got a government duty."

Eight days later, on April 25, Nixon raised the point again.

"Let me ask you this," he said in a conversation with Haldeman and Ehrlichman. "Is there any way you can use cash?"

Ehrlichman: "I don't think so."

Haldeman: "I don't think so."

Nixon then said there was "as much, I think as 200 (thousand dollars) there's available in '74 campaign already."

At the trial, Ben-Veniste asked Haldeman what it was that compounded the problem — whether it was "all the money paid to the defendants over the year?"

Haldeman answered, "No sir, that's not true."

The cross-examination will be finished Thursday, and Ehrlichman's lawyers will begin to put on their defense.

Ben-Veniste said he had brought up the money offer to the two men because it "tends to show there was an agreement" that Nixon, Haldeman and Ehrlichman would all protect each other. Nixon is an unindicted co-conspirator in the case.

Questioned by U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica about the materiality of bringing up that conversation, Ben-Veniste said that under the agreement "Haldeman went up to the Senate Select (Watergate) committee and continued the cover-up."

He said it tended to show that the Haldeman and Ehrlichman knew Nixon would "help them financially if they needed it."

It brought protests from both defendants' lawyers and Ben-Veniste said "I never said it was accepted ... they all understood it in this context."

At that point Haldeman spoke up and said that "it seems to me a highly unsavory connotation" had been raised.

He said the offer was in a conversation two days after Nixon had been told by Asst. Atty. Gen. Henry E. Petersen that the Justice Department felt it had "information embarassing to Mr. Ehrlichman and me if it came out."

"The President did discuss that with us and as a result suggested we retain legal counsel," Haldeman said.

Haldeman said the offer of help for legal fees came after he and Ehrlichman hired lawyers the same day.

Senate Panel Reports 'No Bar' To Rockefeller

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Rules Committee declared Wednesday that its probe of Vice President-designate Nelson A. Rockefeller turned up "no bar or impediment which would disqualify him," even though he displayed poor judgment at times.

The committee already had voted 9 to 0 on Nov. 22 to recommend full Senate approval next Tuesday, but its formal report nonetheless raised several questions it said should be considered before the final tally.

The greatest of all, it said, is the implication raised "in the potential wedding of great wealth and business interests with great political power, the totality of which has been unmatched."

The House Judiciary Committee, meanwhile, continued its own hearings on the other side of the Capitol and heard Rockefeller's brother Laurance disclose yet another loan made at Nelson's initiative.

Laurance S. Rockefeller said he advanced $30,000 to William Miller, then the national Republican chairman, in 1961.

"Since I did not know Mr. Miller, and since Nelson did, I can only assume that I loaned him the money at Nelson's suggestion," he said.

Neither Rockefeller had mentioned the Miller loan in the earlier Senate hearings, and Rep. Jerome Waldie, D-Calif., declared the disclosure "symbolic of the trouble we've had" in the investigations.

"The only way we get the truth is by probing, prodding, and insisting," Waldie said.

Laurance Rockefeller said he had no direct memory of the loan, which was paid back in three years by Miller, and had discovered records of it after the Senate hearings were completed.

Chairman Peter Rodino, D-N.J., of the House committee said Nelson Rockefeller would be recalled as a witness Thursday in what he hopes will be the final day of hearings. He tentatively plans a committee vote next Tuesday, the same day of the confirmation roll call in the Senate.

Voluntary Conservation Failure?

Washington (AP) — Administration officials have begun to concede that President Ford's voluntary energy conservation program isn't working — and the alternatives they propose could mean a return to long lines at gasoline stations early next year.

Treasury Secretary William E. Simon has said he is ready to recommend to the President that the government resort to mandatory allocation of gasoline and other oil products to dealers to reduce consumption.

And Treasury sources say a second part of that effort would be to place a mandatory ceiling on oil imports, cutting them by from 1 million to 1.5 million barrels per day.

Presidential Press Secretary Ron Nessen may have set the stage for such actions when he acknowledged that "the progress toward reducing oil imports is probably not as satisfactory as the President had hoped it would be."

Still, it remains uncertain whether Ford will go along with either mandatory allocations or import ceilings. If he does, it almost surely will spell a renewal of shortages like those during the Arab oil embargo last winter.

Ford is expected to issue a special message on energy policy in mid-January, sources say.

Simon has said the government will know for certain by late December or early January whether the voluntary program will work — and he has made clear his doubts that it will.

Talk of a return to a mandtory allocations came amid generally bad economic news on other fronts Wednesday.

But one encouraging development was a prediction by Chairman Alan Greenspan of the President's Council of Economic Advisers that the nation's inflation rate should slow to 6 to 7 per cent by spring, down from the recent 10 to 12 per cent rates.

Greenspan also predicted, however, that unemployment will continue increasing until it reaches "something over 7 per cent" by mid-1975.

Elsewhere:

—The Commerce Department reported that the nation's businesses are cutting back their plans for investment in new plants and machinery. It projected an 8.5 per cent increase in capital spending for the first half of 1975, a slowdown from the 12.2 per cent increase expected this year.

—Simon and Greenspan said they are preparing a contingency plan to reduce taxes next year that could be used if — and they stress the if — a shot in the arm is needed to pull out of recession. They said it was one of several economic options in the works for the President to consider.

—The Federal Power Commission increased the base rate for natural gas sales from producers to pipelines from 42 cents per thousand cubic feet to 50 cents, a move that should push up natural gas rates to the consumer.

Saudis Confident Of Arms Supply

Riyadh, Saudi Arabia (UPI) — Saudi Arabia is confident it can buy arms from the United States "with no strings attached" and has arranged to buy $800 million worth of munitions from France as well, according to the Saudi defense ministry.

Prince Sultan Ben Abdel Aziz told newsmen at the Saudi oil port of Dammam that he recently signed an agreement with France for cash arms purchases over a four-year period.

He said most of the weapons were tanks and accessories but that sophisticated missiles also were included. French factories already have begun work on the weapons, he said.

The prince also said a delegation of Saudi military technicians under Deputy Defense Minister Prince Turki Ben Abdel Aziz is currently shopping the United States for munitions.

He said the United States "has agreed to provide us with our needs in sophisticated weapons with no strings attached."

Abdel Aziz added that "all we own, is at the dispoeal of the Arab nation and will be in the battle against the common enemy (Israel)."

He also confirmed that Saudi Arabia plans to take full control of its vast oil resources in the near future by acquiring 100% ownership of the Arabian American Oil Co., better known as Aramco, which at present is partly American-owned.

"Our direction now is toward 100% ownership, but the time needed for this may be a few months," the prince said.

The American partners in Aramco are Exxon, Texaco, Standard Oil of California and Mobil Oil. Saudi Arabia won 25% participation in the company in December, 1972, and 60% last June.

According to oil experts, the American companies would continue to provide technicians until Saudi Arabia can train more of its own. The American companies also would get a guaranteed supply of Saudi crude at favorable prices.

The rate for full-time institutional training was raised from $298 to $366 a month.

Inspection Deal Likely

Washington (Star-News) — The remaining unresolved issues in the proposed new strategic arms pact involve verification and inspection questions on which many earlier attempts to reach a U.S.-Soviet arms limitation agreement have failed. But this time administration officials are confident the obstacle can be overcome by next June, when the agreement is to be formalized.

U.S. Auto Slump Worsens In November

Detroit (AP) — The year-long U.S. auto slump worsened last month, with domestic auto makers reporting the worst November but one in 15 years.

Figures released Wednesday showed model sales dropped 35 per cent over the same month a year ago. The only November since 1958 in which they were lower was in 1970, when General Motors was crippled by a nationwide strike.

The four major auto companies said sales for the month totaled 505,511, compared with 775,455 in November 1973, when the energy crisis first sent sales tumbling from record levels.

The Big Three auto makers — GM, Ford and Chrysler — reported monthly declines ranging from 34 to 36 per cent, while American Motors reported a sharp 51 per cent drop.

For the first 11 months of the year, auto sales totaled 7,019,723, a 23 per cent decline from the year before.

The latest monthly results were the industry's 13th straight downward performance, and the third setback in the 1975 model year. October sales were dowh 27 per cent from the year before to their lowest level in a decade, and September deliveries were off 21 per cent.

Industry analysts said they saw no sales rebound on the horizon but predicted the slump wouldn't deepen.

In the meantime, the companies, expecting further slow sales next month, plan to build 26 per cent fewer cars in December than the year before.

The auto makers will have some 200,000 workers on layoff this month — including 165,000 this week — as the companies cut back production because of the persistent sales slump.

Foreign auto makers also were expected to show a sharp drop in November sales. Industry analysts estimated import sales would be down 26 per cent from the year before to 96,000.

GM sales in the month were off 34 per cent to 271,375, and the auto giant's deliveries for the year were 27 per cent behind its 1973 pace. The company said its November performance was the worst in a decade, excluding the 1970 strike month.

November sales were down 13 per cent from October based on the daily selling rate, but industry analysts said such a seasonal decline is typical for the industry.

Sales of Volkswagen, the nation's leading import, were down 46 per cent in November. The two best-selling Japanese imports, Toyota and Datsun, were down 31 and 16 per cent respectively.

Tables Are Turned On Practical Joker

Woodbury, N.J. (UPI) — Bill McGough, an admitted practical joker, and his new bride have a white Italian sports car in their living room because his fellow cops on the local force decided to turn the joke on him.

McGough, 24, and his 22-year old wife, the former Gail Scheffler, returned home Sunday from a one-week honeymoon in Florida to find the car parked in the living room of their two-level frame house in this Philadelphia suburb.

McGough has since learned that eight fellow officers took off the car's tires and window frames so that they could carry it sideways into the living room. He said it apparently was garnered from a junkyard and he is unsure of its make because all markings have been removed.

"Cleaning has been a problem," McGough said Wednesday. "My fiancee — I mean my wife — has been puttering around it with a vacuum."

McGough said the officers also tossed rice in his bed, stuffed a uniform with newspaper and sat it up in his bedroom. They also painted all the soap in the house with vermillion nail polish which makes washing difficult.

UPI

SPORTS CAR . . . in living room.

But McGough said these antics and his own practical jokes of the past were surpassed by the car. This, he said, "is the epitome of a practical joke."

Because the car must be carried sideways to be removed, McGough said he cannot get it out without help from the same cops who put it there.

"And they say they won't help until I throw them a party."

House Demos Leave Whip Appointive Post

Washington (AP) — The House Democratic caucus voted 132 to 38 Wednesday to leave the selection of the party whip in the hands of the speaker and majority leader rather than make the No. 3 post elective.

The overwhelming vote assured continuation of Whip John J. McFall of California in the office.

It also confirmed the trend of the caucus, which is rewriting its own rules and those of the House, to strengthen the hands of the central party leadership and of the caucus itself. The losers in decisions made so far have been committee chairmen, whose autonomous power centers have been narrowed.

The caucus earlier gave itself the final say in designation of chairmen of the Appropriations subcommittees that basically write the big money bills. These appointments had ultimately been under the control of the chairman of the full Appropriations committee, Rep. George Mahon of Texas, who named the subcommittees and so affected the seniority of the members.

Mahon is the second most senior member of the new House.

The caucus also narrowed the powers of the Ways and Means Committee and its chairman, currently the ailing Rep. Wilbur D. Mills of Arkansas.

The caucus sought Wednesday to block chairmen of legislative committees from serving as chairmen of special or joint committees. This could deprive Mills, or his successor, of the chairmanship of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation and Banking Committee Chairman Wright Patman, D-Tex., of the chairmanship of the Joint Economic Committee.

Joint committees include members of both House and Senate. The chairmanship alternates between the two houses.

Rep. Phillip Burton of California, chairman of the reform caucus, said the change "eliminates multiple badge-wearing."

The caucus also decreed that the roll calls of caucus votes in which individual positions are recorded be made available to all members — in effect, making them public.

Speaker Carl Albert and Majority Leader Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. both strongly opposed the move to make the post of whip elective.

Some of the sentiment for electing the whip came from the feeling that the post is a first rung toward the speakership. Albert and others traveled that route. Opponents, however, contended the position is essentially that of an administrative assistant to the majority leader.

The whip's duties include keeping members posted on legislation and making counts to help leaders determine a bill's chances and decide whether to bring it up. McFall is an 18-year House veteran who has been whip for two years.

Tables Are Turned On Practical Joker

Woodbury, N.J. (UPI) — Bill McGough, an admitted practical joker, and his new bride have a white Italian sports car in their living room because his fellow cops on the local force decided to turn the joke on him.

McGough, 24, and his 22-year old wife, the former Gail Scheffler, returned home Sunday from a one-week honeymoon in Florida to find the car parked in the living room of their two-level frame house in this Philadelphia suburb.

McGough has since learned that eight fellow officers took off the car's tires and window frames so that they could carry it sideways into the living room. He said it apparently was garnered from a junkyard and he is unsure of its make because all markings have been removed.

"Cleaning has been a problem," McGough said Wednesday. "My fiancee — I mean my wife — has been puttering around it with a vacuum."

McGough said the officers also tossed rice in his bed, stuffed a uniform with newspaper and sat it up in his bedroom. They also painted all the soap in the house with vermillion nail polish which makes washing difficult.

UPI

SPORTS CAR . . . in living room.

But McGough said these antics and his own practical jokes of the past were surpassed by the car. This, he said, "is the epitome of a practical joke."

Because the car must be carried sideways to be removed, McGough said he cannot get it out without help from the same cops who put it there.

"And they say they won't help until I throw them a party."

House Demos Leave Whip Appointive Post

Washington (AP) — The House Democratic caucus voted 132 to 38 Wednesday to leave the selection of the party whip in the hands of the speaker and majority leader rather than make the No. 3 post elective.

The overwhelming vote assured continuation of Whip John J. McFall of California in the office.

It also confirmed the trend of the caucus, which is rewriting its own rules and those of the House, to strengthen the hands of the central party leadership and of the caucus itself. The losers in decisions made so far have been committee chairmen, whose autonomous power centers have been narrowed.

The caucus earlier gave itself the final say in designation of chairmen of the Appropriations subcommittees that basically write the big money bills. These appointments had ultimately been under the control of the chairman of the full Appropriations committee, Rep. George Mahon of Texas, who named the subcommittees and so affected the seniority of the members.

Mahon is the second most senior member of the new House.

The caucus also narrowed the powers of the Ways and Means Committee and its chairman, currently the ailing Rep. Wilbur D. Mills of Arkansas.

The caucus sought Wednesday to block chairmen of legislative committees from serving as chairmen of special or joint committees. This could deprive Mills, or his successor, of the chairmanship of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation and Banking Committee Chairman Wright Patman, D-Tex., of the chairmanship of the Joint Economic Committee.

Joint committees include members of both House and Senate. The chairmanship alternates between the two houses.

Rep. Phillip Burton of California, chairman of the reform caucus, said the change "eliminates multiple badge-wearing."

The caucus also decreed that the roll calls of caucus votes in which individual positions are recorded be made available to all members — in effect, making them public.

Speaker Carl Albert and Majority Leader Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. both strongly opposed the move to make the post of whip elective.

Some of the sentiment for electing the whip came from the feeling that the post is a first rung toward the speakership. Albert and others traveled that route. Opponents, however, contended the position is essentially that of an administrative assistant to the majority leader.

More Traffic Bottlenecks

We hate to seem disagreeable and picky, after complaining yesterday about the temporarily dangerous situation at the intersection of 9th and P, but there are certain impediments to the orderly flow of traffic in Lincoln that are absolutely unnecessary.

A few well-chosen words from the appropriate city officials ought to clear up the situation by preventing unnecessary traffic bottlenecks.

We are referring to some city employes who at times will use just any old excuse to shut down one or more lanes of traffic on busy streets.

Tuesday afternoon during heavy lunch hour traffic we observed an orange Public Works Department truck parked next to the curb and blocking one of the two westbound lanes on O St. at about 46th. Traffic was backed up behind the truck to the 48th St. intersection. Cars which were stuck in the curb lane were trying to move into the inside line as the traffic in that one through lane whizzed by. There were several near-accidents and motorists in the east-bound left-turn stacking lane at 46th had a long wait for westbound traffic to finally pass through the bottleneck.

East O St. carries between 25,000 and 30,000 vehicles per day. It is a heavily-traveled street as anyone can see. Street or utility construction would be a good reason to close lanes on O St. to traffic movement.

But what was the crew doing which parked the truck which blocked traffic Tuesday afternoon?

Removing leaves from the storm sewer.

Now, they could have parked the truck around the corner some 30 or 40 feet to the west on 46th where there was less traffic and carted the leaves that distance from the sewer to the truck. But it was easier for them to park the truck next to the sewer — bottling up traffic and inconveniencing scores and maybe hundreds of motorists in the process.

This is not an isolated example. There have been other occasions on which traffic has been stopped for questionable purposes.

We realize that city crews have to keep working week in and week out to keep up with street and utility maintenance and that lanes have to be blocked on many occasions for the safety of the workers.

But we also suggest that it has become very difficult just to drive from one point to another in Lincoln. There are many unnecessary obstacles to the smooth flow of traffic. Blocking one lane of Lincoln's busiest street at one o'clock in the afternoon to shovel leaves into a truck is one of them.

Department heads ought to schedule non-priority work for slack traffic hours and caution their crews not to block traffic unless it is absolutely necessary.

Wind Or Gentle Breeze?

"The winds of change have arrived in the U.S. House of Representatives," Rep. Phillip Burton of California said upon being elected chairman of the House Democrats' caucus.

Burton is said to be an activist who favors giving rank-and-file members of the majority party a greater voice in setting House policy and giving Democrats more power on committees.

The Democratic caucus also took the committee assignment function away from the Ways and Means Committee, chaired by Rep. Wilbur Mills, D.-Ark.; liberalized that powerful panel by expanding its membership and the caucus might have suggested sterner action against the chairman had not poor old Wilbur slipped into the hospital Tuesday after a weekend of erratic behavior in Boston. The Democrats effected further change by replacing House Doorkeeper William "Fish Bait" Miller.

So it appears that Democratic liberals and moderates want more say in making House policy and affecting the flow of legislation.

But if the "winds of change" are to do any meaningful cleansing in the House, the majority party will have to do more than throw out Fish Bait Miller and elect a liberal as caucus chairman.

The top leadership — the uninspiring duo of Speaker Carl Albert and Majority Leader Tip O'Neill — were re-elected to their positions without opposition.

The winds of change may turn out to be a gentle breeze wafting amidst the status quo.

LA VERNA HASSLER

Patchwork Prairie Country

Perhaps this is not an article slanted toward December but there is also something unusual about picking strawberries in November.

In our town a strawberry bed produced two quarts of strawberries November seventh . . . this, after we had experienced a freeze. Though not a hard freeze, the berries were safe, nestled under the leaves of the plants. The gardener reported the berries were plump and full, nice and red and some of the best strawberries of the entire season.

Strawberries in November must be as delicious as those that are picked first in the spring. It is not often that one expects a garden to continue producing. Thinking still more about the subject, it is not often that we have a November that was as mild and enjoyable as the one we have just left behind us.

December days are bleak and bare, gray overcast, with wind that makes one wish he had taken flight with the birds to the southland. The scent of pine from Christmas trees stacked at the side of a super-market made the day less of a chilly wintry one for me today. One green tree softly piled against the other in row on row made me think of the deep, dark forest from which they came. The pungent pine scent made me think of Christmas, nearer than I have had time to think of it. No cookies baked, although I know of one smart housewife who has hers all baked and put safely in the deep-freeze.

No fruit cake made as yet, although several women have told me they made theirs last week.

No Christmas shopping done, even though many have already concluded their choice of gifts for their family. In fact, I haven't a Christmas card purchased as yet.

I do know Christmas will not wait until I am ready to take part in the festivities. It hasn't in past years. As we used to say, when playing hide-and-seek in school, "Ready or not, here I come," Christmas also gives such warning. Something tells me I had best begin to make some preparation because if I am not ready, I am going to be left dangling out on the feathery branch of the Christmas tree.

I have made one purchase toward making Christmas a day of too rich food and too many sweets by adding a small can of shelled walnuts to my sack of groceries today. Maybe . . . just maybe I will get candy made one of these days. That, too, must quickly be put in the deep-freeze. My weakness seems to be homemade fudge candy with nuts scattered generously through each piece.

☆ ☆ ☆

I suppose I could complain about the price of sugar this year, the inflation and a myriad of other things, but to have another Christmas with the majority of family faces about will give me compensation enough to enjoy the togetherness of the holiday.

There are two tiny babies in our family who will see their first Christmas this year. The joy of their being will be like the twinkle of the star from atop the tree.

So whether I have all the last-minute decorating done this year or miss a minute of preparation, the Christmas season will have the happiness of the season tucked into it. There is always a way to say, "I have so much this Christmas to be happy about. "Though there have been losses along the way, the high price of sugar and inflation talk seem trivial in comparison. So one may as well look to the highest star atop the tree, call back memories of other years and listen for the sound of sleigh-bells outside the door.

☆ ☆ ☆

And thinking of Christmas and fudge and nuts, I think I'll take just a nibble of walnuts . . . say, two or three. They will never be missed in the Christmas candy. Well, it looks as if Christmas will begin the same as always with me . . . the nibbling habit. Christmas and the habit will neither ever change, it seems.

Ford's Nice-Guy Leadership

PRESIDENT FORD

By JAMES RESTON

WASHINGTON — President Ford's last news conference is an almost perfect illustration of his struggle with himself in his new job. Confronted by devilish economic problems, he tried to say the American people should take the inflation, the recession and the energy crisis seriously, but not too seriously. It was a hard time, he suggested, and they shouldn't go fishing or go crazy. They should be sensible. They should sacrifice, but a big tax on gas, now supported by Henry Ford and General Motors, was probably too much.

There was something reassuring about his natural honesty, even when one answer seemed to contradict the next. He wanted the American people to do more, to sacrifice more, to cut down their consumption of gas, and turn down the lights. He said maybe they were more willing to conserve energy than the President or the Congress were asking them to do, but they weren't doing enough voluntarily, and he didn't want to tax gas and oil to force them to do so.

"I have not been persuaded," he said, "that a 20% increase in the gas tax is the right answer. I was interested in a poll that was published today which indicated that 81% of the people agree with me (against a 20-cent-a-gallon tax on gas) and don't agree with the various people who are advocating this. I think I'm on pretty solid ground."

☆ ☆ ☆

But he's not on solid ground. Not with the people who are looking for hard decisions to deal with the national economic problem, not with the other free nations that are looking to Washington for a lead in dealing with inflation and unemployment. Not even with members of his own cabinet, who are privately and sometimes even openly lobbying for mandatory controls — gas taxes, auto-weight taxes, etc., to achieve the President's own goal of reducing "our importation of oil from overseas by a million barrels a day."

The President was undoubtedly right to come out against the present pessimistic mood in the capital and the country. This town is in the dumps and is talking rubbish about loitering down into another depression like the thirties. The country is not in an economic depression but it is in danger of a psychological depression, and this is what President Ford, quite properly, was leaning against.

The comparison between 1974 and 1932, which intrigues so many amateur historians around here, is bad history and dangerous economics. We had between 15 and 17 million unemployed in 1932 — compared with five or six million now.

In the fall of 1932, 34 million men, women and children in America were without any income whatsoever. The G.N.P. that year was $41 billion and now we are in the trillions. Farmers were selling their wheat then for less than two bits a bushel, and getting three cents a pound for their sugar.

Oats were going to the farmer for a dime a bushel, and cotton and wool for a nickel a pound. The average weekly wage for people who were lucky enough to have jobs was a little over $16. So President Ford was quite right to insist that we stop talking about 1974 in terms of the depression of the early thirties.

☆ ☆ ☆

Still, President Ford continues to sound like the old partisan leader on Capitol Hill, as if he hadn't quite moved downtown to the White House and taken over the presidency. He talks about popularity polls as if they were a guide to leadership, and about his goals as if they had no connection to his policies.

More important, the gap between Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's public definition of the national energy problem and the President's definition of what should be done about it is wide and startling. In his recent speech at the University of Chicago, Kissinger talked about "discipline," not only in the United States but in all the oil-consuming countries, about reducing U.S. oil imports over the next decade from seven million barrels a day to no more than one million barrels a day; and doing whatever was necessary to achieve these goals.

Ford, however, without differing from this objective, insists on voluntary means of achieving it, while conceding that the voluntary way is not working. In short, he is still talking in the White House like a political leader on Capitol Hill, insisting on his objectives but citing the popularity polls as a justification for his easy compromises.

In fairness, Ford has a dilemma: how to deal with the congenital pessimism of Washington, without resorting to outrageous optimism on both the economy and the strategic arms control agreement he has just negotiated with the Russians.

His latest news conference merely brought all this to the fore. He is so honest that he disarms everybody who lived through the devious Nixon era, but he still has a problem. For he is counting on voluntary sacrifice to solve his economic problems, while conceding that it isn't really working, and insisting that he is not ready for compulsory controls.

Ford, the Republican leader in Congress, could fiddle with all this, but as president he will soon have to decide whether his voluntary system is working or not.

For All The World To See

JUDGE SIRICA

By MARQUIS CHILDS

WASHINGTON — From the high bench, Judge John J. Sirica looks down on the courtroom with an imperturbable gaze. It is no secret to him that if they had their way, the defendants in the dock and their lawyers would hang him from the nearest tree.

That being slightly impractical, counsel for the principal defendants sought at the start of the seemingly interminable Watergate coverup trial to have him thrown out. They charged him with bias and with having a personal prosecutorial interest in the outcome. This, they said, went far beyond the issue of guilt or innocence.

The response of the U.S. Court of Appeals was a unanimous verdict upholding Judge Sirica and praising his conduct of the Watergate cases. One intimation in the lawyers' brief had a ring of truth: If it had not been for Sirica's probing questions in the initial trial of the Watergate burglers, the involvement of the principals — former Attorney General John N. Mitchell and the two White House triggermen, H. R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman — might never have been known.

Through his years of experience, Sirica is thoroughly familiar with the constraints of the law. But he has never hesitated to raise questions that might result in justice's being thwarted when it appeared the lady with the scales was being done in.

As the unedited tapes played in the courtroom show, former President Nixon clung to the belief that the burglars could be bailed out and the whole business put down to a prank by eager beavers in the Committee to Re-elect the President. He proposed that columnist William F. Buckley be turned loose to build up E. Howard Hunt, the Watergate burglar with CIA connections.

Sniping at Sirica has come not only from defense lawyers in the courtroom but from zealous champions of the now discredited Nixon White House. They have sought to show that he is cruel, vindictive, a hanging judge.

Ironically, these same attackers have in the past been among those calling for "law and order" and denouncing the coddling of unfortunates who fall into the net of the law.

The hope is that the coverup trial will end before Christmas, unless there is a postponement for the testimony of Richard Nixon. Then, after the first of the year, Judge Sirica will have an opportunity to consider the hundreds of invitations that have come from all over the country asking him to speak and take part in law school and bar association forums. Having imposed a gag rule on counsel, the judge has been careful to refrain from any comment off the bench.

It is an exercise in patience to sit day after day knowing that an inadvertent remark or a casual ruling will be seized on as ground for throwing the case out of court, or for overruling the verdict of the jury. The jury will in the end reach the verdict of guilty or not guilty on the various counts of the indictment. But the role of the judge in this perhaps the most important trial in this century is second only to that of the jury.

Sirica has become a national and indeed an international figure. Those who have known him over the years say his fame has made no difference. He is what he has always been: a bold disciple of justice.

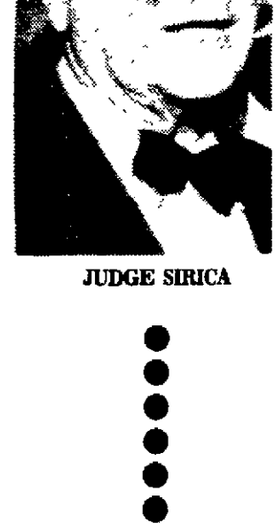

It was a stroke of good fortune that the Watergate cases fell to this experienced trial judge with no flourishes or pretensions. Today he probably knows more about the intricacies of the whole Watergate intrigue than anyone other than a half-dozen researchers in the special prosecutor's office.

One of the sorriest episodes in America's history is slowly winding down. The American system of justice, despite the encumbrances, the barnacles acquired over the years, is working. The accused are having their day in court with the aid of counsel whose large fees are part of the penalty.

It is impossible to believe that this could ever happen again. The lesson of Watergate has been seared into the American consciousness. In that brightly lighted courtroom, the last act of this painful drama is being played out for all the world to see.

Yuletide Mission To Seoul

PRESIDENT PARK

By JACK ANDERSON

SEOUL — I flew to South Korea on a Christmas mission to seek the release of 12 religious leaders who have been jailed for anti-government activities. President Park Chung Hee agreed, after a two-hour discussion, to give my appeal "careful consideration."

I came here at the urging of Christian leaders who asked me to make a personal appeal to the tough South Korean leader for clemency. They explained that I am well-known in Korea. Therefore, they thought I might have some impact on President Park. He listened attentively to my case for clemency, frequently nodding his head affirmatively.

He stressed that the imprisoned Christians had not been arrested for criticizing the government but for violating the law. Many vocal critics openly denounce his regime, he said, yet they "are not sent to jail."

Only those who violated the law, meaning emergency security measures, were arrested, he said. He had to weigh my plea for clemency, he explained, with his duty to enforce the law and to protect his country from subversion.

☆ ☆ ☆

Opponents charge that the emergency measures were imposed for the sole purpose of stifling dissent. President Park vigorously denies this and swears his devotion to democracy.

As evidence that he is confronted with a grave national emergency, he cited an alarming North Korean military build-up, the discovery of an infiltration tunnel under the demilitarized zone, almost daily incidents along the truce line and acts of subversion within his country.

He has been marked for assassination himself by the North Koreans. In 1968, a team of North Korean commandos slipped across the buffer zone and into the outskirts of Seoul in an unsuccessful attempt to attack his official residence. Only three months ago, an assassin fired a volley of shots at him and succeeded in killing his wife.

President Park contended that nations sometimes must adopt emergency measures when their security is threatened. Even the United States suspended the civil rights of Japanese-Americans on the West Coast and threw them into concentration camps after the bombing of Pearl Harbor.

The South Korean leader's aides showed me documentary evidence of the threat against their country. Across the 38th Parallel, North Korea has been massing men and weapons for a possible resumption of the Korean War. A total of 813 fortified gun positions have been spotted inside the North Korean half of the demilitarized zone in outright violation of the truce agreement. Some of the larger guns could bombard Seoul itself.

The military build-up has been accompanied by a propaganda barrage which has now reached 800 hours of broadcasting beamed against South Korea. This also violates an agreement that the two Koreas would not defame one another.

The propaganda is designed to support an underground effort to overthrow the Park regime and replace it with a government that would be acceptable to North Korea. Then, the communists promised to work for a "peaceful unification" of Korea. Whether the North Koreans achieve unification by peaceful or military means, of course, they will settle for nothing less than a communist-controlled Korea.

U.S. intelligence not only has confirmed the military build-up but the underground operation to subvert the Park regime. Unquestionably, North Korea is developing and directing an underground organization inside South Korea. Communist agents are infiltrating the country, some by secret landings on the long coastline, but most through the large Korean community in Japan. The communist agents, of course, are doing their utmost to bring down President Park. The Park regime, therefore, suspects all dissidents of communist connections.

Korean religious leaders have assured me that the jailed Christians are anti-communist but, admittedly, also anti-Park. It is also admitted that they violated the emergency laws, subsequently suspended, by participating in anti-Park agitation.

The Christian activists contend that Park has turned South Korea into a dictatorship and that they are fighting for elementary freedom. One of South Korea's most respected clerics, the Rev. Kim Joon Gon, president of the Korean Campus Crusades for Christ, told me earnestly: "I pray that somehow the imprisoned religious leaders will be released."

He conceded, nevertheless, that the church has far more freedom in South than in North Korea. "In the United States," he said, "you have 100% religious freedom. In South Korea, we have 80% religious freedom. In North Korea, they have zero percentage."

He also said the activists represent only a small fraction of Korean Christians. He described them as "liberation Christians," who believe the church must side with the oppressed and work to change society.

The majority of Korean Christians, he said, agree that the church must side with the oppressed but believe it must keep out of politics. It is difficult, he admitted, "to draw the line between religious action and political action." But he said the majority would draw the line at violence.

As the Rev. Kim reminds, Jesus Christ was the Prince of Peace.

☆ ☆ ☆

December days are bleak and bare, gray overcast, with wind that makes one wish he had taken flight with the birds to the southland. The scent of pine from Christmas trees stacked at the side of a super-market made the day less of a chilly wintry one for me today. One green tree softly piled against the other in row on row made me think of the deep, dark forest from which they came. The pungent pine scent made me think of Christmas, nearer than I have had time to think of it. No cookies baked, although I know of one smart housewife who has hers all baked and put safely in the deep-freeze.

No fruit cake made as yet, although several women have told me they made theirs last week.

No Christmas shopping done, even though many have already concluded their choice of gifts for their family. In fact, I haven't a Christmas card purchased as yet.

I do know Christmas will not wait until I am ready to take part in the festivities. It hasn't in past years. As we used to say when playing hide-and-seek in school, "Ready or not, here I come," Christmas also gives such warning. Something tells me I had best begin to make some preparation because if I am not ready, I am going to be left dangling out on the feathery branch of the Christmas tree.

I have made one purchase toward making Christmas a day of too rich food and too many sweets by adding a small can of shelled walnuts to my sack of groceries today. Maybe . . . just maybe I will get candy made one of these days. That, too, must quickly be put in the deep-freeze. My weakness seems to be homemade fudge candy with nuts scattered generously through each piece.

I suppose I could complain about the price of sugar this year, the inflation and a myriad of other things, but to have another Christmas with the majority of family faces about will give me compensation enough to enjoy the togetherness of the holiday.

There are two tiny babies in our family who will see their first Christmas this year. The joy of their being will be like the twinkle of the star from atop the tree.

So whether I have all the last-minute decorating done this year or miss a minute of preparation, the Christmas season will have the happiness of the season tucked into it. There is always a way to say, "I have so much this Christmas to be happy about. "Though there have been losses along the way, the high price of sugar and inflation talk seem trivial in comparison. So one may as well look to the highest star atop the tree, call back memories of other years and listen for the sound of sleigh-bells outside the door.

☆ ☆ ☆

And thinking of Christmas and fudge and nuts, I think I'll take just a nibble of walnuts . . . say, two or three. They will never be missed in the Christmas candy. Well, it looks as if Christmas will begin the same as always with me . . . the nibbling habit. Christmas and the habit will neither ever change, it seems.

Ford's Nice-Guy Leadership

PRESIDENT FORD

By JAMES RESTON

WASHINGTON — President Ford's last news conference is an almost perfect illustration of his struggle with himself in his new job. Confronted by devilish economic problems, he tried to say the American people should take the inflation, the recession and the energy crisis seriously, but not too seriously. It was a hard time, he suggested, and they shouldn't go fishing or go crazy. They should be sensible. They should sacrifice, but a big tax on gas, now supported by Henry Ford and General Motors, was probably too much.

There was something reassuring about his natural honesty, even when one answer seemed to contradict the next. He wanted the American people to do more, to sacrifice more, to cut down their consumption of gas, and turn down the lights. He said maybe they were more willing to conserve energy than the President or the Congress were asking them to do, but they weren't doing enough voluntarily, and he didn't want to tax gas and oil to force them to do so.

"I have not been persuaded," he said, "that a 20% increase in the gas tax is the right answer. I was interested in a poll that was published today which indicated that 81% of the people agree with me (against a 20-cent-a-gallon tax on gas) and don't agree with the various people who are advocating this. I think I'm on pretty solid ground."

☆ ☆ ☆

But he's not on solid ground. Not with the people who are looking for hard decisions to deal with the national economic problem, not with the other free nations that are looking to Washington for a lead in dealing with inflation and unemployment. Not even with members of his own cabinet, who are privately and sometimes even openly lobbying for mandatory controls — gas taxes, auto-weight taxes, etc., to achieve the President's own goal of reducing "our importation of oil from overseas by a million barrels a day."

The President was undoubtedly right to come out against the present pessimistic mood in the capital and the country. This town is in the dumps and is talking rubbish about loitering down into another depression like the thirties. The country is not in an economic depression but it is in danger of a psychological depression, and this is what President Ford, quite properly, was leaning against.

The comparison between 1974 and 1932, which intrigues so many amateur historians around here, is bad history and dangerous economics. We had between 15 and 17 million unemployed in 1932 — compared with five or six million now.

In the fall of 1932, 34 million men, women and children in America were without any income whatsoever. The G.N.P. that year was $41 billion and now we are in the trillions. Farmers were selling their wheat then for less than two bits a bushel, and getting three cents a pound for their sugar.

Oats were going to the farmer for a dime a bushel, and cotton and wool for a nickel a pound. The average weekly wage for people who were lucky enough to have jobs was a little over $16. So President Ford was quite right to insist that we stop talking about 1974 in terms of the depression of the early thirties.

☆ ☆ ☆

Still, President Ford continues to sound like the old partisan leader on Capitol Hill, as if he hadn't quite moved downtown to the White House and taken over the presidency. He talks about popularity polls as if they were a guide to leadership, and about his goals as if they had no connection to his policies.

More important, the gap between Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's public definition of the national energy problem and the President's definition of what should be done about it is wide and startling. In his recent speech at the University of Chicago, Kissinger talked about "discipline," not only in the United States but in all the oil-consuming countries, about reducing U.S. oil imports over the next decade from seven million barrels a day to no more than one million barrels a day; and doing whatever was necessary to achieve these goals.

Ford, however, without differing from this objective, insists on voluntary means of achieving it, while conceding that the voluntary way is not working. In short, he is still talking in the White House like a political leader on Capitol Hill, insisting on his objectives but citing the popularity polls as a justification for his easy compromises.

In fairness, Ford has a dilemma: how to deal with the congenital pessimism of Washington, without resorting to outrageous optimism on both the economy and the strategic arms control agreement he has just negotiated with the Russians.

His latest news conference merely brought all this to the fore. He is so honest that he disarms everybody who lived through the devious Nixon era, but he still has a problem. For he is counting on voluntary sacrifice to solve his economic problems, while conceding that it isn't really working, and insisting that he is not ready for compulsory controls.

Ford, the Republican leader in Congress, could fiddle with all this, but as president he will soon have to decide whether his voluntary system is working or not.

For All The World To See

JUDGE SIRICA

By MARQUIS CHILDS

WASHINGTON — From the high bench, Judge John J. Sirica looks down on the courtroom with an imperturbable gaze. It is no secret to him that if they had their way, the defendants in the dock and their lawyers would hang him from the nearest tree.

That being slightly impractical, counsel for the principal defendants sought at the start of the seemingly interminable Watergate coverup trial to have him thrown out. They charged him with bias and with having a personal prosecutorial interest in the outcome. This, they said, went far beyond the issue of guilt or innocence.

The response of the U.S. Court of Appeals was a unanimous verdict upholding Judge Sirica and praising his conduct of the Watergate cases. One intimation in the lawyers' brief had a ring of truth: If it had not been for Sirica's probing questions in the initial trial of the Watergate burglers, the involvement of the principals — former Attorney General John N. Mitchell and the two White House triggermen, H. R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman — might never have been known.

Through his years of experience, Sirica is thoroughly familiar with the constraints of the law. But he has never hesitated to raise questions that might result in justice's being thwarted when it appeared the lady with the scales was being done in.

As the unedited tapes played in the courtroom show, former President Nixon clung to the belief that the burglars could be bailed out and the whole business put down to a prank by eager beavers in the Committee to Re-elect the President. He proposed that columnist William F. Buckley be turned loose to build up E. Howard Hunt, the Watergate burglar with CIA connections.

Sniping at Sirica has come not only from defense lawyers in the courtroom but from zealous champions of the now discredited Nixon White House. They have sought to show that he is cruel, vindictive, a hanging judge.

Ironically, these same attackers have in the past been among those calling for "law and order" and denouncing the coddling of unfortunates who fall into the net of the law.

The hope is that the coverup trial will end before Christmas, unless there is a postponement for the testimony of Richard Nixon. Then, after the first of the year, Judge Sirica will have an opportunity to consider the hundreds of invitations that have come from all over the country asking him to speak and take part in law school and bar association forums. Having imposed a gag rule on counsel, the judge has been careful to refrain from any comment off the bench.

It is an exercise in patience to sit day after day knowing that an inadvertent remark or a casual ruling will be seized on as ground for throwing the case out of court, or for overruling the verdict of the jury. The jury will in the end reach the verdict of guilty or not guilty on the various counts of the indictment. But the role of the judge in this perhaps the most important trial in this century is second only to that of the jury.

Sirica has become a national and indeed an international figure. Those who have known him over the years say his fame has made no difference. He is what he has always been: a bold disciple of justice.

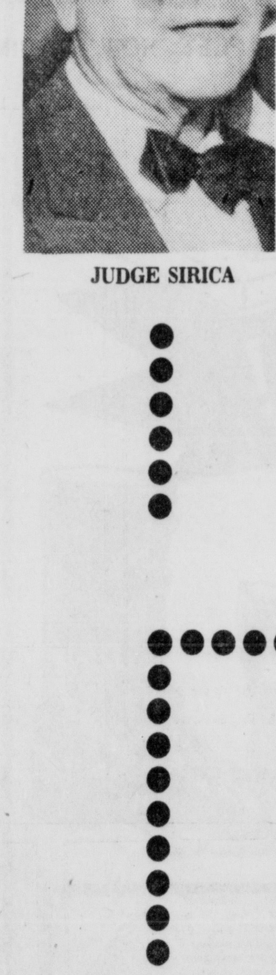

It was a stroke of good fortune that the Watergate cases fell to this experienced trial judge with no flourishes or pretensions. Today he probably knows more about the intricacies of the whole Watergate intrigue than anyone other than a half-dozen researchers in the special prosecutor's office.

One of the sorriest episodes in America's history is slowly winding down. The American system of justice, despite the encumbrances, the barnacles acquired over the years, is working. The accused are having their day in court with the aid of counsel whose large fees are part of the penalty.

It is impossible to believe that this could ever happen again. The lesson of Watergate has been seared into the American consciousness. In that brightly lighted courtroom, the last act of this painful drama is being played out for all the world to see.

Yuletide Mission To Seoul

PRESIDENT PARK

By JACK ANDERSON

SEOUL — I flew to South Korea on a Christmas mission to seek the release of 12 religious leaders who have been jailed for anti-government activities. President Park Chung Hee agreed, after a two-hour discussion, to give my appeal "careful consideration."

I came here at the urging of Christian leaders who asked me to make a personal appeal to the tough South Korean leader for clemency. They explained that I am well-known in Korea. Therefore, they thought I might have some impact on President Park. He listened attentively to my case for clemency, frequently nodding his head affirmatively.

He stressed that the imprisoned Christians had not been arrested for criticizing the government but for violating the law. Many vocal critics openly denounce his regime, he said, yet they "are not sent to jail."

Only those who violated the law, meaning emergency security measures, were arrested, he said. He had to weigh my plea for clemency, he explained, with his duty to enforce the law and to protect his country from subversion.

☆ ☆ ☆

Opponents charge that the emergency measures were imposed for the sole purpose of stifling dissent. President Park vigorously denies this and swears his devotion to democracy.

As evidence that he is confronted with a grave national emergency, he cited an alarming North Korean military build-up, the discovery of an infiltration tunnel under the demilitarized zone, almost daily incidents along the truce line and acts of subversion within his country.

He has been marked for assassination himself by the North Koreans. In 1968, a team of North Korean commandos slipped across the buffer zone and into the outskirts of Seoul in an unsuccessful attempt to attack his official residence. Only three months ago, an assassin fired a volley of shots at him and succeeded in killing his wife.

President Park contended that nations sometimes must adopt emergency measures when their security is threatened. Even the United States suspended the civil rights of Japanese-Americans on the West Coast and threw them into concentration camps after the bombing of Pearl Harbor.

The South Korean leader's aides showed me documentary evidence of the threat against their country. Across the 38th Parallel, North Korea has been massing men and weapons for a possible resumption of the Korean War. A total of 813 fortified gun positions have been spotted inside the North Korean half of the demilitarized zone in outright violation of the truce agreement. Some of the larger guns could bombard Seoul itself.

The military build-up has been accompanied by a propaganda barrage which has now reached 800 hours of broadcasting beamed against South Korea. This also violates an agreement that the two Koreas would not defame one another.

The propaganda is designed to support an underground effort to overthrow the Park regime and replace it with a government that would be acceptable to North Korea. Then, the communists promised to work for a "peaceful unification" of Korea. Whether the North Koreans achieve unification by peaceful or military means, of course, they will settle for nothing less than a communist-controlled Korea.

U.S. intelligence not only has confirmed the military build-up but the underground operation to subvert the Park regime. Unquestionably, North Korea is developing and directing an underground organization inside South Korea. Communist agents are infiltrating the country, some by secret landings on the long coastline, but most through the large Korean community in Japan. The communist agents, of course, are doing their utmost to bring down President Park. The Park regime, therefore, suspects all dissidents of communist connections.

Korean religious leaders have assured me that the jailed Christians are anti-communist but, admittedly, also anti-Park. It is also admitted that they violated the emergency laws, subsequently suspended, by participating in anti-Park agitation.

The Christian activists contend that Park has turned South Korea into a dictatorship and that they are fighting for elementary freedom. One of South Korea's most respected clerics, the Rev. Kim Joon Gon, president of the Korean Campus Crusades for Christ, told me earnestly: "I pray that somehow the imprisoned religious leaders will be released."

He conceded, nevertheless, that the church has far more freedom in South than in North Korea. "In the United States," he said, "you have 100% religious freedom. In South Korea, we have 80% religious freedom. In North Korea, they have zero percentage."

He also said the activists represent only a small fraction of Korean Christians. He described them as "liberation Christians," who believe the church must side with the oppressed and work to change society.

The majority of Korean Christians, he said, agree that the church must side with the oppressed but believe it must keep out of politics. It is difficult, he admitted, "to draw the line between religious action and political action." But he said the majority would draw the line at violence.

As the Rev. Kim reminds, Jesus Christ was the Prince of Peace.

Survey: President Ford's Overall Standing Is Narrowly Positive

By LOUIS HARRIS

President Ford's overall standing with the American people is a narrow 48-47% positive, up slightly from his 49-45% negative rating after he had pardoned former President Nixon. But this latest rating is still far below the 67-20% favorable majority Ford achieved in his first few weeks in office.

While Ford received mostly negative results on 17 specific issues, he does emerge with a positive standing in four key areas:

—On his "TV speeches and press conferences," President Ford attains his highest rating, a 60-34% positive. These results indicate that the President's candid demeanor and "nice guy" public image in both speeches and press conferences have real public appeal and are helping him immeasurably.

—On "working for peace in the world," Ford receives a 52-38% positive standing, although this rating does not fully reflect his recent trip to Asia and his summit meeting with the Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev. However, Ford's rating on foreign policy still does not match that of President Nixon. Even when a majority wanted President Nixon out of office, 61% of the public still credited him with, "working for peace." Apparently, a substantial number of people are reserving judgment about Ford's capabilities and achievements in international affairs.

—A plurality of 46-37% gives Ford a positive rating on "protecting the rights and privacy of individuals," a particularly sensitive matter for any man succeeding Richard Nixon in the White House. The public clearly expects the President to keep his earlier promise to put an end to illegal wiretapping and political espionage.

—On "handling relations with

Louis Harris

Improvement Is Slight

Congress," President Ford receives a confidence vote of 51-40%, at least 27 percentage points higher than that of President Nixon in 1974. The public seems to believe Ford's promise to cooperate with Capitol Hill and does not feel that a more than two-thirds Democratic majority would produce disastrous results, as Ford warned during the recent campaign.

—On the critical issue of "inspiring personal confidence in the White House," Ford emerges with a 48-45% positive rating, just one point worse than the 48-44% positive standing recorded for him in early October. Such a close margin between positive and negative votes indicates that the public will reserve judgment of Ford until he has had a chance to put his programs into effect.

The most serious negatives in the Ford record to date are obvious:

—In the economic area, he has slipped into some deep trouble. In this latest survey, 75-18% give Ford a negative rating for "keeping inflation under control," down sharply from the 55-37% negative vote in October.

The President has severely lost credibility in his promises to "cut federal spending," with a 55-28% negative vote, down from the 56-34 negative October rating. This marked lack of public confidence in the President's ability to control federal spending could prove to a serious handicap for him in trying to get backing for any of his economic policies or, certainly, in attempting to blame federal spending on his Democratic Congress.

—On "granting a full pardon to former President Nixon," the public remains solidly negative, by 61-33%. While these results are slightly better than the 67-29% negative rating recorded just after the pardon, Ford's decision is likely to impede his ability to gain public trust and backing in 1976.

—A 63-27% majority votes against the President's proposal of a "5% surcharge income tax on incomes of $15,000 and up."

In November, a cross section of 1,525 households was asked:

Life Begins At Forty:

Widow Contemplates Move To Apartment

By ROBERT PETERSON

A reader writes: "My husband died in October after a lingering illness. I'm afraid alone in the house at night and there're so many memories that make me sad. Should I move into an apartment?"

It is hard to know what to tell this woman, for the answer depends more on what she is like than on what I think. Let me illustrate.

A woman I know went through a similar experience not long ago. She nursed a desperately sick husband for almost a year. He died, and within a month she had put her house on the market and was looking for an apartment. Now, three months later, she had just moved into the apartment, and she is delighted in every way with her new situation.

Naturally she accepts the recurring wrenching pain of loss that she still feels, especially when she goes to or near the old house. There are too many memories stored there which bring that bitter-sweet mixture of pleasure and pain that thinking of a long happy life with a deceased loved one always brings.

Like our reader, she was afraid in the house alone and did not feel up to the responsibility of maintaining the house alone, nor did she want to. As a matter of fact, she had been begging her husband for three or four years to sell the house and move into an apartment, but he had kept putting her off as he really liked the house, puttered in it constantly, and loved the yard.

So this woman had made up her mind even before her husband became ill that if she had her free choice she'd live in an apartment. She was more than ready to take the step from house to apartment, and it is working out fine for her.

Another case worked out quite differently. The woman was an enthusiastic gardener, loved to fix things in her house, touch up paint here and there, refinish furniture, and walk in the neighborhood. Naturally, she felt at home there and had friends nearby.

For her, time seemed to make the memories in the house easier to bear until they actually became a comfort. So, though the first weeks after her husband's death she had thought seriously of moving, and her relatives had begged her to take an apartment near them, she stayed put, and she continues to take pleasure in the things connected with her old home.

So, friend reader, it really comes down to how you feel. You'll get advice both ways from well-meaning relatives and friends. And do not doubt the sincerity of those in your family who beg you to move near them. Just remember, it's your life. You have a pattern you have followed for a long time. Even though you are alone now, you still have a style of life that is uniquely yours.

If I were you, I'd try to get away for a week or two and then see how it feels to go back into the house alone. If it still hurts too much or makes you too frightened at night, move. Rent an apartment for six months if you can in an area where you think you'd like to live.

Put the house up for sale. If you can't get an unfurnished apartment, store your own furniture for the time being. Cut down on the things you have to worry about. Settle into the apartment, get out doing things again with and for your friends, and see if you don't find life a lot brighter.

One last word. Don't be afraid to make a mistake. By moving you are not necessarily committing yourself to that place forever. Change, after all, is a big factor in everyone's life.

So, though the first weeks after her husband's death she had thought seriously of moving, and her relatives had begged her to take an apartment near them, she stayed put, and she continues to take pleasure in the things connected with her old home.

So, friend reader, it really comes down to how you feel. You'll get advice both ways from well-meaning relatives and friends. And do not doubt the sincerity of those in your family who beg you to move near them. Just remember, it's your life. You have a pattern you have followed for a long time. Even though you are alone now, you still have a style of life that is uniquely yours.

If I were you, I'd try to get away for a week or two and then see how it feels to go back into the house alone. If it still hurts too much or makes you too frightened at night, move. Rent an apartment for six months if you can in an area where you think you'd like to live.

Put the house up for sale. If you can't get an unfurnished apartment, store your own furniture for the time being. Cut down on the things you have to worry about. Settle into the apartment, get out doing things again with and for your friends, and see if you don't find life a lot brighter.

One last word. Don't be afraid to make a mistake. By moving you are not necessarily committing yourself to that place forever. Change, after all, is a big factor in everyone's life.

Weekend College Provides Alternative For Students

(EDITOR'S NOTE: For someone who doesn't want to attend college full-time during the week or in the evenings, Mundelein College in Chicago has come up with an alternative. Jane Shaw reports from the Chicago bureau of McGraw-Hill World News.)

By JANE SHAW

Chicago — Like many working women, 29-year-old Maureen Greene missed out on college. Her father died when she was a child, and first priority for a college education went to her brothers. By the time she could afford college — about four years ago — she doubted that she could compete with students just out of high school, and the slow progress and heavy load of college didn't appeal to her.

Then she found the Mundelein weekend college in residence. Today, she takes a full course load at the college which is located in Chicago, while working full-time as an administrator of a sports celebrity service.

Ms. Greene goes to school on the weekends — but only about every third weekend, and spends the intervening weeks studying at home following her own schedule. The weekend program is not meant to be "watered down" education, but is rather a new way to organize education for mature, highly motivated adults. Students spend less time in class than they would in the traditional Mundelein program; but they receive almost an equal number of college credits.

The weekend program which began this fall works this way: students spend five weekends in each three-month term at Mundelein. Actually, weekend residence is optional; a student can commute to the campus for classes, instead, as Ms. Greene does.

For each course they spend three hours in class per weekend. Theoretically, a weekend college student can complete college in four years — even while working full-time — by taking three terms of three courses each plus one independent study course in the summer during a calendar year. Weekend students pay regular tuition ($190 per course) plus a $50 residential fee if they stay overnight for the five weekends.

The program does have its limitations. Only six courses are offered each term — compared to the 200 or so courses listed in the regular Mundelein catalog. But they are highly unusual and likely to appeal to many students. Among the current offerings: living with death, existentialism as humanism, the United States in the 1960's. Another course, strategies for learning, is required for all full-time students. And each course falls into one of four areas of concentration or majors. These are: communications and media, community relations, business and management world, and personal universe. To receive the B.A. degree, each student must take three courses in each area, and concentrate in one of those areas.

Most of the weekend students are working women who hold clerical or managerial positions (some men also attend, though Mundelein is a women's college). A few are divorced women who are rearing children as well as holding down jobs. Students' ages range from 18 to 55 years (median is about 33 years), and their educational background varies from no college experience to several years of college.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Study Gemini message for valid hint. You may also be dealing with lively persons, but also those who are stubborn. Journeys had best be postponed, if practical. There is tendency to confuse directions, instructions, reservations. Family member pays fine compliment.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Avoid any tendency to overspend. Extravagance is the enemy. Also means self-control in areas other than monetary — this is important. Know when to pull in emotional reins. If this you do, you save money and avoid upset. Pisces, Virgo figure prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You are primed for best efforts. Cycle is high and you may be on way to striking pay dirt. Those who have been creating obstacles will show their true colors. This tells you — know, stand, keep the faith!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Finish rather than begin — get a peek behind the scenes. Avoid conflicts with neighbors, relatives. One close to you is restless, may want to move and craves action. Ride with him. You will comprehend and do what should be done.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Friends and money now make a poor mixture. Be independent. Strive for originality. Imprint your own style. Bending over to accommodate others is not right at this time. Message will become increasingly clear.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Tendency exists to act on impulse. Key is to pay heed to intuitive intellect without abandoning reason. Aquarius figures prominently. One you care for lets you know that your feelings are reciprocated.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Light touch wins your way. Means don't nag, push or chide. Sagittarius, Gemini persons are in picture. Accent is on journeys, communication, education and language. You may find yourself subject of a feature story that gains wide distribution!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): What was a mystery is solved and dissolved. Another Aquarian is in picture — and so, too, is a Leo and Scorpio. The questions concerning taxes, insurance, investments and shelters will surface. Be frank, not blunt. Difference will become obvious as day progresses.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You get action from one who seemed out of reach. A suggestion, note, letter or call gets favorable response. You are complimented for creative abilities. Change is indicated and you are beneficiary.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are analytical, attractive to opposite sex, have innate ability to write, communicate and you also have strong desire to impart knowledge. Emotional burden will be lifted and, in 1975, you will be flexible and happy. The money problems will be solved, too.

Honolulu — "One, two, three!" said the lady instructor. "One, two, three. Now — with the hands: 'To the Hukilau.' Now — around the island."

All hotels offer free hula lessons to the mainland wahines.

The hips revolve slowly — about slow speed for delicate garments on a washing machine.

It is a dipping, sliding motion. The hands tell the story.

☆ ☆ ☆

Banana pancakes and banana muffins. Tart guava juice the color of an Arizona sunset. Coffee as strong as wire splice. That is the way we live in Paradise these ever-loving days.

The ever-fresh trade wind sweeps the lanai with a feather touch.

The palm trees sway like a hula dancer.

☆ ☆ ☆

The handy hula stories are not much. I don't mean to be over critical. But you couldn't do a high budget movie treatment out of these stories.

"A boy meets a girl on a boat. They decide to have a picnic."

That is one hula. And it takes a long time to tell it what with hips and hands and little finger movements like fish. (I gather they had sardine sandwiches at the picnic.)

However, mainland ladies are mad to learn this thing.

They line up at 11 in the a.m. for the hula hour. And if you miss this sight, you are missing the greatest thing in Hawaii.

☆ ☆ ☆

"Mirror, mirror on the wall. Who is the fairest of them all?"

The mirror shuddered a little. But the mirrors at the Kahala Hilton are extremely honest — which you would expect in a scatter that cost a cool $11 million.

"You," said the mirror frankly, "are the fairest of them all. In fact, you are a kind of ghastly, ghostly white. You have no more tan than an uncooked doughnut. And man, in these islands, that's bad!"

☆ ☆ ☆

This is absolutely true. And the malahini's first day at the beach is more painful than his first sunburned night.

You can put on an aloha shirt for the elevator. But those long white legs stick out beneath. (I never noticed how oyster-white they were before. Maybe it's the fluorescent lighting.)

You stagger out to the beach, tripping in the soft sand.

The sun-tanned boys and girls are sprawled upon the sun-tanned sands. They look up and sneer as you go by.

The beach boy comes by with a towel. That coconut-pickin' Hawaiian has a built-in tan!

You lie down and hide your face from that ever-loving sun. Tonight, the object of your affections has changed your complexion from white to lobster red. (Ouch! Not on the back, man!)

☆ ☆ ☆

Thus between sun-tan and hula, between the rummy mai tai and the banana pancakes, the muffins have a time for themselves in Hawaii . . .

"One, two, three," said the hula lady. "Now — around the island!"

The ladies revolved "around the island." Gracefully if they were suntanned. Painfully if they were sunburned.

That's a story that the hula never tells.

Ah, the mynah birds chatter. Of falling stocks and mutual funds that got too mute. Of mergers that split and isn't Penn Central a hell of a way to run a railroad?

Beyond the reef (that's a hula song, man, to lift your heart if not your blue chip stocks) — the surf comes creaming in. The surf boards hold the golden boys and girls who have been oiled and browned like barbecued chickens.

You must hula. And you must tan.

Banana pancakes and banana muffins. Tart guava juice the color of an Arizona sunset. Coffee as strong as wire splice. That is the way we live in Paradise these ever-loving days.

The ever-fresh trade wind sweeps the lanai with a feather touch.

The palm trees sway like a hula dancer.

☆ ☆ ☆

The handy hula stories are not much. I don't mean to be over critical. But you couldn't do a high budget movie treatment out of these stories.

"A boy meets a girl on a boat. They decide to have a picnic."

That is one hula. And it takes a long time to tell it what with hips and hands and little finger movements like fish. (I gather they had sardine sandwiches at the picnic.)

However, mainland ladies are mad to learn this thing.

They line up at 11 in the a.m. for the hula hour. And if you miss this sight, you are missing the greatest thing in Hawaii.

☆ ☆ ☆

"Mirror, mirror on the wall. Who is the fairest of them all?"

The mirror shuddered a little. But the mirrors at the Kahala Hilton are extremely honest — which you would expect in a scatter that cost a cool $11 million.

"You," said the mirror frankly, "are the fairest of them all. In fact, you are a kind of ghastly, ghostly white. You have no more tan than an uncooked doughnut. And man, in these islands, that's bad!"

☆ ☆ ☆

This is absolutely true. And the malahini's first day at the beach is more painful than his first sunburned night.

You can put on an aloha shirt for the elevator. But those long white legs stick out beneath. (I never noticed how oyster-white they were before. Maybe it's the fluorescent lighting.)

You stagger out to the beach, tripping in the soft sand.

The sun-tanned boys and girls are sprawled upon the sun-tanned sands. They look up and sneer as you go by.

The beach boy comes by with a towel. That coconut-pickin' Hawaiian has a built-in tan!

You lie down and hide your face from that ever-loving sun. Tonight, the object of your affections has changed your complexion from white to lobster red. (Ouch! Not on the back, man!)

☆ ☆ ☆

Thus between sun-tan and hula, between the rummy mai tai and the banana pancakes, the muffins have a time for themselves in Hawaii . . .

"One, two, three," said the hula lady. "Now — around the island!"

The ladies revolved "around the island." Gracefully if they were suntanned. Painfully if they were sunburned.

That's a story that the hula never tells.

Ah, the mynah birds chatter. Of falling stocks and mutual funds that got too mute. Of mergers that split and isn't Penn Central a hell of a way to run a railroad?

Beyond the reef (that's a hula song, man, to lift your heart if not your blue chip stocks) — the surf comes creaming in. The surf boards hold the golden boys and girls who have been oiled and browned like barbecued chickens.

You must hula. And you must tan.

Welfare Consolidation Recommended

WASHINGTON (AP) — A three-year congressional study recommends ending most public welfare programs, including food stamps, in favor of tax credits, new subsistence allowances and work incentives.

The study, released Wednesday by Rep. Martha W. Griffiths, D-Mich , also calls for an end to state control of welfare programs in favor of a federally administered system that would be run by the Internal Revenue Service.

"Let's junk the whole thing. It's impossible," Mrs. Griffiths said at a news conference at which the new proposal was released. She said she was introducing a bill Thursday for the new system.

At the same time, the Agriculture Department announced proposed new regulations to force poor people to spend more for food stamps. The higher cost of food stamps would save the government at least $645 million a year, the department estimated

Under the plan, families would pay 30 per cent of their net monthly income beginning next March 1 to receive food stamps. Currently, the cost averages about 23 per cent

The nation's 14 7 million food stamp receipients presently pay about $2 5 billion for approximately $6.5 billion worth of coupons

The welfare report, prepared by the subcommittee on fiscal policy of the Joint Economic Committee, recommended a system of tax credits of $225 a person to replace the current personal exemption of $750 a person on federal income taxes, and a subsistence allowance to poor families and individuals that would be reduced by 50 cents for every dollar earned by recipients.

Mrs. Griffiths said the total value of grants and tax credits would come to $3,600 for a penniless family of four with two adults and $3,000 for a family of four with one adult.

She said the new program would cost the federal government $157.4 billion annually, compared with the estimated $142 billion being spent in the current 1974-75 fiscal year on social service programs such as welfare, health, education and Social Security. The current federal budget totals slightly over $300 billion.

The report recommends beginning the new program in 1977 but says that it could be phased in beginning this fiscal year Mrs Griffiths said it could be financed by a normal growth in tax revenues

Existing programs of aid to families with dependent children and food stamps would be scrapped under the proposal, but the supplemental security income program for the aged, blind and disabled would continue.

Under the proposal, states would be required to supplement for at least two years the new federal cash payments and tax credits to families who received aid to dependent children as of December 1976, if they were worse off under the new system. After that, states could voluntarily supplement new cases or continue to supplement the old at their own expenses.

Figures provided with the report showed that families of four with two adults would have annual gains in income ranging from $3,600 at the low end of the poverty scale to $334 for a family with earnings of $7,500. A gain of $315 was forecast for a family of four with earnings of $10,000, and a $215 increase for a family earning $15,000.

Because of the tax credit provision, families earning above $25,000 would show a net loss of $60, the report said.

It predicted that an estimated 34 million persons would be eligible for grants and tax credits for some portion of the year, compared with an estimated 35 million persons it said now are receiving some form of welfare benefits.

Ex-Employe Of Hughes Is Awarded $2.8 Million

Los Angeles (AP) — Robert Maheu, who once headed Howard Hughes' Nevada operations, was awarded $2.8 million by a jury Wednesday for remarks the billionaire industrialist made about him in a 1971 telephone interview.

The six jurors returned the verdict in U.S. District Court after deliberating for six days in the penalty phase of Maheu's $11.1 million defamation suit.

On a counterclaim filed by Hughes' Summa Corp. against Maheu, the jurors awarded $47,733.63.

The legal battle began nearly three years ago when the eccentric Hughes staged a bizarre telephonic news conference which was nationally televised although Hughes could not be seen.

A panel of newsmen listened to and asked questions of a raspy voice identified as Hughes, who was believed to be in the Bahamas. During the conference, the voice declared that Mahue was "a no-good dishonest son-of-a-bitch and he stole me blind."

Altarpiece Recovered

Bergamo, Italy (AP) — An altarpiece by Italian Renaissance master Lorenzo Lotto valued at $2.3 million was recovered by police nearly one month after it was stolen from a church at Sedrina, a village near this north Italian city.

Police Chief Suggests U.S. Is No. 1 Concern

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Los Angeles Police Chief Edward Davis says America should solve its own juvenile gang, poverty and crime problems first and "to hell with the poor people in the rest of the world."

Describing himself as "somewhat of a neo-isolationist," Davis said: "I get so sick of reading about our public leaders visiting this country or that country or the other country, and we are solving all the problems of the world and we can't even keep our kids alive," Davis said.

He noted that there were 11 youth gang killings in Los Angeles in 1971, 20 in 1972, 39 in 1973 and 70 so far this year

"They don't even know the guy they're killing. It doesn't make any difference. It's fun," Davis said

"If we get to where we have perfection and paradise here, then we will go out and help somebody else first," said Davis.

"Let's make our country strong enough so we can keep everyone out and to hell with the poor people in the rest of the world. Let's take care of all the poor people in America," he said "If we can't do that, we have no business running around trying to settle all the affairs" of the world

Davis addressed the Governors Conference on Criminal Justice Tuesday.

Homeowner Retaliates With Music

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Fed up with the bright lights and noisy intercom system of the car dealer next door, Sigmund Schy is waging a battle of nerves and eardrums.

Each morning before leaving for work, Schy turns on a repeating 20-minute tape of Hawaiian and rock music. The raucous music is punctuated by homemade commercials for Fords, Chevrolets and Pontiacs, designed to get the goat of the Oldsmobile dealer next door.

Dealer Frank Crippen said he uses the bright lights to attract customers The intercom system is used to communicate with salesmen on the lot, he said.

Schy's counterattack apparently has had some effect.

"One customer came all the way from Naples (Fla) to buy a car from us," said salesman Bob Gallagher. "After a few minutes of listening to that racket he said, 'I can't take any more of this. I have a headache.' He left and bought his car someplace else."

"It is driving me up the creek," said another salesman, Ray Gonzalez. "I wish he'd change the music."

Schy admits the music emanating from his high-powered rooftop speaker is awful "Why do you think I spend the whole day away from home?"

Crippen says he has lawyers working on two court orders — one to have Schy cut out the all-day broadcast and another to collect $400 Crippen says Schy owes for auto repairs.

North Miami Police Chief James Devaney says Crippen has not made a complaint against Schy, and that the self-styled broadcaster is not making a public nuisance of himself.

Schy has initiated legal action to have Crippen shade the car lot's lights, which Schy says "could illuminate the Orange Bowl."

Jacobs' Refusal Saves His Life

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep-elect Andrew Jacobs Jr., D-Ind., planned to fly to Washington from Indianapolis on Sunday, but the only seat he could get was in first class Jacobs refused to spend the extra $20 in government money and got a tourist-class seat in a Saturday night flight instead

The flight Jacobs passed up was Trans World Airlines 514 which crashed Sunday, killing all 92 persons aboard.

Welfare Consolidation Recommended

WASHINGTON (AP) — A three-year congressional study recommends ending most public welfare programs, including food stamps, in favor of tax credits, new subsistence allowances and work incentives.

The study, released Wednesday by Rep. Martha W. Griffiths, D-Mich., also calls for an end to state control of welfare programs in favor of a federally administered system that would be run by the Internal Revenue Service.

"Let's junk the whole thing. It's impossible," Mrs. Griffiths said at a news conference at which the new proposal was released. She said she was introducing a bill Thursday for the new system.

At the same time, the Agriculture Department announced proposed new regulations to force poor people to spend more for food stamps. The higher cost of food stamps would save the government at least $645 million a year, the department estimated.

Under the plan, families would pay 30 per cent of their net monthly income beginning next March 1 to receive food stamps. Currently, the cost averages about 23 per cent.

The nation's 14.7 million food stamp receipients presently pay about $2.5 billion for approximately $6.5 billion worth of coupons.

The welfare report, prepared by the subcommittee on fiscal policy of the Joint Economic Committee, recommended a system of tax credits of $225 a person to replace the current personal exemption of $750 a person on federal income taxes, and a subsistence allowance to poor families and individuals that would be reduced by 50 cents for every dollar earned by recipients.

Mrs. Griffiths said the total value of grants and tax credits would come to $3,600 for a penniless family of four with two adults and $3,000 for a family of four with one adult.

She said the new program would cost the federal government $157.4 billion annually, compared with the estimated $142 billion being spent in the current 1974-75 fiscal year on social service programs such as welfare, health, education and Social Security. The current federal budget totals slightly over $300 billion.

The report recommends beginning the new program in 1977 but says that it could be phased in beginning this fiscal year. Mrs. Griffiths said it could be financed by a normal growth in tax revenues.

Existing programs of aid to families with dependent children and food stamps would be scrapped under the proposal, but the supplemental security income program for the aged, blind and disabled would continue.

Under the proposal, states would be required to supplement for at least two years the new federal cash payments and tax credits to families who received aid to dependent children as of December 1976, if they were worse off under the new system. After that, states could voluntarily supplement new cases or continue to supplement the old at their own expenses.

Figures provided with the report showed that families of four with two adults would have annual gains in income ranging from $3,600 at the low end of the poverty scale to $334 for a family with earnings of $7,500. A gain of $315 was forecast for a family of four with earnings of $10,000, and a $215 increase for a family earning $15,000.

Because of the tax credit provision, families earning above $25,000 would show a net loss of $60, the report said.

It predicted that an estimated 34 million persons would be eligible for grants and tax credits for some portion of the year, compared with an estimated 35 million persons it said now are receiving some form of welfare benefits.

Ex-Employe Of Hughes Is Awarded $2.8 Million

Los Angeles (AP) — Robert Maheu, who once headed Howard Hughes' Nevada operations, was awarded $2.8 million by a jury Wednesday for remarks the billionaire industrialist made about him in a 1971 telephone interview.

The six jurors returned the verdict in U.S. District Court after deliberating for six days in the penalty phase of Maheu's $11.1 million defamation suit.

On a counterclaim filed by Hughes' Summa Corp. against Maheu, the jurors awarded $47,733.63.

The legal battle began nearly three years ago when the eccentric Hughes staged a bizarre telephonic news conference which was nationally televised although Hughes could not be seen.

A panel of newsmen listened to and asked questions of a raspy voice identified as Hughes, who was believed to be in the Bahamas. During the conference, the voice declared that Mahue was "a no-good dishonest son-of-a-bitch and he stole me blind."

Police Chief Suggests U.S. Is No. 1 Concern

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Los Angeles Police Chief Edward Davis says America should solve its own juvenile gang, poverty and crime problems first and "to hell with the poor people in the rest of the world."

Describing himself as "somewhat of a neo-isolationist," Davis said: "I get so sick of reading about our public leaders visiting this country or that country or the other country, and we are solving all the problems of the world and we can't even keep our kids alive," Davis said.

He noted that there were 11 youth gang killings in Los Angeles in 1971, 20 in 1972, 39 in 1973 and 70 so far this year.

"They don't even know the guy they're killing. It doesn't make any difference. It's fun," Davis said.

"If we get to where we have perfection and paradise here, then we will go out and help somebody else first," said Davis.

"Let's make our country strong enough so we can keep everyone out and to hell with the poor people in the rest of the world. Let's take care of all the poor people in America," he said. "If we can't do that, we have no business running around trying to settle all the affairs" of the world.

Davis addressed the Governors Conference on Criminal Justice Tuesday.

Homeowner Retaliates With Music

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Fed up with the bright lights and noisy intercom system of the car dealer next door, Sigmund Schy is waging a battle of nerves and eardrums.

Each morning before leaving for work, Schy turns on a repeating 20-minute tape of Hawaiian and rock music. The raucous music is punctuated by homemade commercials for Fords, Chevrolets and Pontiacs, designed to get the goat of the Oldsmobile dealer next door.

Dealer Frank Crippen said he uses the bright lights to attract customers. The intercom system is used to communicate with salesmen on the lot, he said.

Schy's counterattack apparently has had some effect.

"One customer came all the way from Naples (Fla.) to buy a car from us," said salesman Bob Gallagher. "After a few minutes of listening to that racket he said, 'I can't take any more of this. I have a headache.' He left and bought his car someplace else."

"It is driving me up the creek," said another salesman, Ray Gonzalez. "I wish he'd change the music."

Schy admits the music emanating from his high-powered rooftop speaker is awful. "Why do you think I spend the whole day away from home?"

Crippen says he has lawyers working on two court orders — one to have Schy cut out the all-day broadcast and another to collect $400 Crippen says Schy owes for auto repairs.

North Miami Police Chief James Devaney says Crippen has not made a complaint against Schy, and that the self-styled broadcaster is not making a public nuisance of himself.

Schy has initiated legal action to have Crippen shade the car lot's lights, which Schy says "could illuminate the Orange Bowl."

Jacobs' Refusal Saves His Life

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep.-elect Andrew Jacobs Jr., D-Ind., planned to fly to Washington from Indianapolis on Sunday, but the only seat he could get was in first class. Jacobs refused to spend the extra $20 in government money and got a tourist-class seat in a Saturday night flight instead.

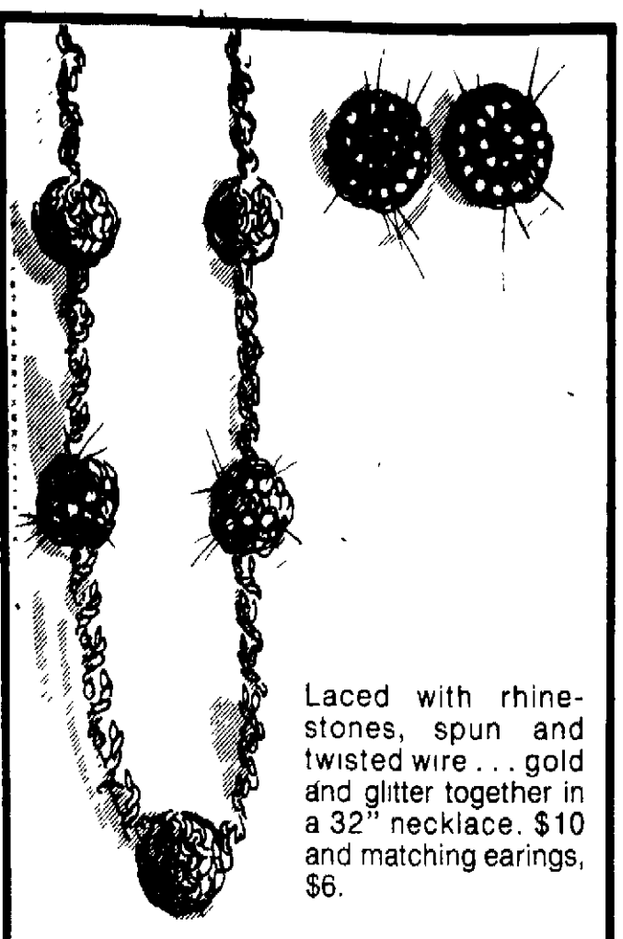

The flight Jacobs passed up was Trans World Airlines 514 which crashed Sunday, killing all 92 persons aboard.

Keep Open Minds To New Ideas, County Officials Told

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

"We must have open minds to new approaches to old problems," Nebraska county officials were told Wednesday as the 80th session of the Nebraska Association of County Officials opened.

Edward T. Weaver, executive director of the American Public Welfare Association, told the officials that welfare services can best be delivered by local people in the community.

However, he said the economy is the critical issue in providing needed human services.

Talk about needed human services "will be just talk if the economy doesn't improve," he said.

Referring to proposed cutbacks affecting welfare programs suggested by President Ford, Weaver said that the only reduction was in federal participation.

'Passes Burden Along'

"It merely passes the burden along to the poor and the already heavily burdened local and state governments," he said.

For example, he said, the Work Incentive program (WIN) "was beginning to work better," but the federal government has now decided to reduce funding for the training and employment of welfare recipients.

State and local governments have only two options, he said, that of picking up the costs being shifted from the federal government or cutting back services and welfare programs.

"Most will have to cut back," Weaver said, noting that in the federal government's proposal to cut back nothing was said about a reduction in the need for services.

Striking out at Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) rules and regulations, Weaver said the rules are "arbitrary and unrealistic," resulting in many problems in the welfare area.

Citing the food stamp program as an example, Weaver said legislation was passed whereby 50% of administrative costs of the food stamp program would be borne by the federal government.

No Regulations

The effective date was Nov. 1 and "the U.S. Department of Agriculture has yet to issue regulations," he said, adding that the states are required to deliver the services without the funding.

Also critical of HEW rules and regulations was Eugene H. Brandt, president of the Nebraska Nursing Home Association.

He said the HEW rules and regulations have a large impact on the rising costs of nursing home care.

He said the average per diem cost for nursing home care in Nebraska is $13.49, but implementation of new HEW rules will hike this by $1.66, resulting in a montly average cost of $454.50, instead of the current $404.70.

Solution Not Easy

Finding a solution to meeting the increased costs is not easy, he said, noting that more stringent rules on staff and facilities continue to be added along with inflationary increases.

"We prefer to provide good quality care at a reasonable cost," he said, but the "complexity of HEW regulations (causes) our biggest expense."

Nebraska County officials Thursday will hear panel discussions on rural road right-of-way problems and proposed corrective legislation.

Climaxing Thursday's sessions will be the annual banquet featuring Stanley Smoot, president of the National Association of County Officials.

House Refuses To Cut Budget $540.6 Million

Washington (AP) — The House, exercising its budget control authority for the first time Wednesday, refused to allow President Ford to cut back spending authority for this fiscal year by $540.6 million.

Ford had recommended the budget cuts under a new procedure enacted by Congress last summer. His recommendations must be approved by both the House and Senate to take effect.

The House approved $116.9 million in budget cuts Ford recommended, but rejected his request to cut $455.6 million for rural electrification loans and $85 million for agricultural conservation programs.

The cuts approved by the House affect road construction in the national park system, forest service roads and trails, college housing loans and airport development in the Appalachian region.

Senate passage of the bill is still required before any of the proposed cuts can go into effect.

Congress has not taken any action on $4.6 billion in budget cuts recommended by Ford on Nov. 26. Under the budget control procedure, Congress has 45 days in which to approve them.

Environment Center Plans Being Formed

Bellevue (AP) — A 19th Century farm would operate again. A wetlands would be created where persons could move in close and study waterfowl.

Farm and garden plots would be started. An area would be created for students to learn about hunting safety.

Other areas would be set aside to study nature, seeds and chemicals, and to operate projects involving cattle, swine and poultry.

Those are among tentative plans for the beginnings of the Gifford Environmental Education Center planned on 1,620 acres near Bellevue.

The concept was announced three years ago when Dr. Harold Gifford said he would donate land for a center adjacent to Fontenelle Forest, and now the details are starting to emerge, according to State Sen. Frank Lewis of Bellevue.

Principal users of the center would be Nebraska and Iowa students, grade school through college, whose school systems are part of the new Metropolitan Education Program Agency, which currently has 26 members enrolling about 160,000 students. Development hinges on raising about $750,000 to purchase 738 acres from the Gifford Foundation, Lewis said.

Dr. and Mrs. Gifford have donated 886 acres to the agency on condition that the additional 738 acres be purchased.

The land, which includes about five miles of Missouri River shore and is adjacent to Fontenelle Forest, has a market value of about $1,100 an acre, Lewis said. Lewis is the agency's planning director.

He said he will begin making contacts with foundations and other agencies this weekend to seek money to buy the 738 acres, and will present the tentative development plan to the agency board for approval next week.

He predicted that tied in with programs of Fontenelle Forest, the Gifford center will become a nationally acclaimed layout for understanding and improving the environment and agriculture.

Employers' Payments Unchanged

State Labor Commissioner Jerry Chizek said Wednesday he will keep employers' contributions to the employment security fund at current levels for calendar 1975

Chizek's decision followed a hearing Wednesday attended by 36 representatives of businesses. Each employer's contribution is determined by a complicated formula

Chizek said he anticipates approximately $25 million in unemployment benefits will be paid in 1975.

Chief Says Tow Away Snowwagen

MONROE, Mich. (AP) — Some unknown snowsculptor did so well carving a life-sized Volkswagen that the police chief ordered it towed away.

The copy, complete with deliniated doors, windows, bumpers and the familiar Beetle shape, was carved into a mound of snow that plows had left in a downtown parking space Sunday night after a massive snowstorm.

Tuesday afternoon Chief Paul Peters was overheard on police radio channels ordering patrolmen to remove one car that appeared to have Ohio license plates and another that he said was a small foreign car.

A patrolman responded that the small car was only a pile of snow.

"I don't care what it is," the chief roared. "If you have to, get a wrecker over there and have it towed away."

Housing Beefs Public Hearing Set For Monday

Lincolnites who have a beef about housing and community development needs and want to tell city officials about it can make their voices heard at a public hearing Monday night.

The session, hosted by the Community Development Task Force, will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the cafeteria at the County-City Building.

The hearing is one of three such sessions in which citizens can participate in discussions about where the city should spend federal funds allocated for redevelopment programs. Other hearings will be on Feb. 13 and March 6.

Lincoln is expected to receive $8.9 million over the next six years

5 Student Vets Will Be Taken By Minnesota

By United Press International

The University of Minnesota has informed University of Nebraska officials it will accept five veterinary medicine students from Nebraska during each of the next two years.

Dr. Duane Acker, vice chancellor of the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, said the final agreement has not been reached, but added the offer is acceptable to him.

Acker said the University of Minnesota has also tentatively proposed that it accept 9 veterinary medicine students from Nebraska in 1977, 13 in 1978, 16 in 1979 and 20 in 1980.

The cost for each Nebraska student would be about $12,000 a year. Minnesota will be the sixth state that has agreed to train veterinary of medicine students from Nebraska.

Acker said only about one-third of those who would like to attend a school for veterinary of medicine training get the chance because of a lack of facilities.

$30 Million Wanted

Philadelphia (AP) — The Penn Central Railroad says it will petition bankruptcy court for permission to draw on $30 million in federal funds authorized by the U.S. Department of Transportation.

Going to move? Then notify the Circulation Dept. so you won't miss your paper. Be sure to give both old and new address.

Tuesday afternoon Chief Paul Peters was overheard on police radio channels ordering patrolmen to remove one car that appeared to have Ohio license plates and another that he said was a small foreign car.

A patrolman responded that the small car was only a pile of snow.

"I don't care what it is," the chief roared. "If you have to, get a wrecker over there and have it towed away."

Housing Beefs Public Hearing Set For Monday

Lincolnites who have a beef about housing and community development needs and want to tell city officials about it can make their voices heard at a public hearing Monday night.

The session, hosted by the Community Development Task Force, will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the cafeteria at the County-City Building.

The hearing is one of three such sessions in which citizens can participate in discussions about where the city should spend federal funds allocated for redevelopment programs. Other hearings will be on Feb. 13 and March 6.

Lincoln is expected to receive $8.9 million over the next six years.

5 Student Vets Will Be Taken By Minnesota

By United Press International

The University of Minnesota has informed University of Nebraska officials it will accept five veterinary medicine students from Nebraska during each of the next two years.

Dr. Duane Acker, vice chancellor of the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, said the final agreement has not been reached, but added the offer is acceptable to him.

Acker said the University of Minnesota has also tentatively proposed that it accept 9 veterinary medicine students from Nebraska in 1977, 13 in 1978, 16 in 1979 and 20 in 1980.

The cost for each Nebraska student would be about $12,000 a year. Minnesota will be the sixth state that has agreed to train veterinary of medicine students from Nebraska.

Acker said only about one-third of those who would like to attend a school for veterinary of medicine training get the chance because of a lack of facilities.

$30 Million Wanted

Philadelphia (AP) — The Penn Central Railroad says it will petition bankruptcy court for permission to draw on $30 million in federal funds authorized by the U.S. Department of Transportation.

Going to move? Then notify the Circulation Dept. so you won't miss your paper. Be sure to give both old and new address.

100% Farm Price Parity Goal Set

By JOEL THORSON
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Grand Island — Farmers Union national president Tony Dechant of Denver said here Wednesday night his organization will ask the 94th Congress to set target prices on farm commodities at 100% of parity and loan rates at 90% of parity.

Farmers need such assurances, he said, if they are to undertake full production.

Dechant was the featured banquet speaker during the second day of the Nebraska Farmers Union three-day state convention.

Dechant said assurances of meaningful price floors are needed by farmers in planning for the future. Besides the parity recommendations, Dechant said the cost-of-production escalator clause slated to take effect in 1976 should be applied to 1975 crops.

Dairy price supports, he said, should be increased to 90% of parity from the present level of 73%, which Dechant described as "criminal." Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz is required by law to keep milk prices above 80% and as high as 90% of parity, he said, but has not done so.

"Thousands of dairy farmers are going out of business, selling their dairy herds in competition with their livestock," he said.

Dechant took issue with calls for decreased domestic consumption of beef. Americans should eat more beef, not less, to keep the livestock industry afloat, he said.

The NFU delegates resolved support of a House of Representatives bill which would liberalize estate tax laws, increasing the personal estate exemption from $60,000 to $200,000 and increasing the marital deduction. A resolution opposing any surtax on fuel use for agricultural production was also adopted.

Water-Damaged Items Sorted At Omaha Store

Omaha (AP) — Brandeis employes Wednesday were sorting merchandise damaged Tuesday afternoon at the downtown Omaha store when a chilled water coil broke, sending water onto portions of five floors.

John Diesing, vice president and secretary, said he wouldn't have a definite estimate of damage to the building and merchandise for about a week. But, he said, the loss probably will range from $25,000 to $50,000. The loss is covered by insurance.

He said employes completed most of the clean-up work by 9 p.m. Tuesday, about eight hours after the coil came loose from a connection on the third floor.

Water from the break covered parts of the basement, first, second and third floors. And when water leading to the third-floor coil was turned off, the increased pressure caused a break in another coil on the ninth floor.

Damage was mainly restricted to the southeast corner of the store, but sloping floors carried water farther in some cases.

Geneva Home Plans To Install Sprinklers

Lincoln Star Special

Geneva — Sunset Home of Geneva will continue to operate as a nursing home for aged patients, it was announced by officials at the home this week.

Some concern had been shown by residents in this area following a report that the home was in trouble with licensing authorities because of fire safety violations.

A contract has been let to Continental Fire Sprinkler Co. of Omaha to install a pressurized sprinkler system throughout the building for fire protection at a cost of $42,000, officials of the home said. This includes a 10,000-gallon pressurized water tank and 200 sprinkler heads.

Another contract has been let to Troyer Brothers of Milford to install ⅝-inch fire guards on basement ceilings at a cost of $2,800, it was reported.

These improvements are a demand of the state fire marshal and meet requirements of health and welfare boards.

Construction Accident Kills Omaha Worker

Omaha (AP) — An Omaha construction worker was electrocuted Wednesday afternoon while delivering concrete blocks to a construction project in southwest Omaha.

Officials identified the victim as Samuel E. Cromer, 22, an employe of the Larsen Cement and Stone Co., for the past five years.

Cromer was operating a hydraulic boom which came in contact with a power line, investigators said.

He was pronounced dead on arrival at a local hospital.

College Closes In Scottsbluff As Power Fails

Scottsbluff (AP) — Nebraska Western College officials were forced to dismiss all classes Wednesday afternoon and cancel evening classes when the power on the campus failed.

Nebraska Public Power District officials said the outage was in the school's system, and was caused by a short somewhere in the underground lines belonging to the school.

It was hoped that classes could be resumed Thursday.

Jordan To Get Wheat

Washington (AP) — Jordan will get 20,000 metric tons (734,000 bushels) of wheat worth $3.6 million under a new Food for Peace Loan agreement, the Agriculture Department said.

The Near South Neighborhood Association will sponsor a Kids' Day Out for infants through grade school children, Dec. 7, 14 and 21 at First Plymouth Congregational Church, 20th and D Streets.

Children will be entertained with movies, arts and crafts, snacks and stories from 1-5 p.m. at the church while their parents shop for Christmas gifts.

The charge for Kids' Day Out will be $2 for one child and $1 for each additional child in a family. Parents wanting to participate in the program should use the east door of the church.

Better Mobility Crucial—Bentsen

Houston (UPI) — A balanced transportation system is a crucial priority for a mobile society, Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen, D-Tex., told officials of the nations' cities Monday.

"Not since the 1920s when we became aware of the need for interstate highways and good city streets has this nation confronted such a compelling need for improved mobility," Bentsen said.

Douglas Bank Held Up

Omaha (AP) — Omaha police said a lone gunman held up the Douglas County Bank in the downtown Benson area about 11:45 a.m. Wednesday, making off with an undetermined amount of cash from one teller.

Officials said a black man about 25 years old walked into the bank, then up to the teller window.

Bank President Carl Brady told reporters that the man was armed, but that he did not produce a weapon during the robbery.

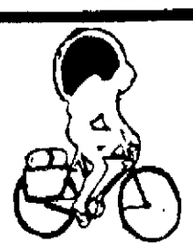

Bank President Carl Brady said the man walked up to a teller window, displayed a handgun, and asked for money.

Brady said there was only one customer in the bank at the time of the holdup, but that three persons got a good look at the robber because he did not wear a mask or disguise.

The bandit was last seen jumping into large white car parked near the bank. The driver of the car, a black woman, then sped north, and out of sight.

An audit was begun to determine the amount of money taken.

A spokesman for the Omaha FBI office, which entered the case, said investigators were not ruling out the possibility that the man committing Wednesday's holdup might be the same person who held up the downtown walk-in facility of the First National Bank of Omaha last Friday.

UP Theatre Is Donated To Society

Omaha (AP) — The Union Pacific Railroad has donated its Round House Theater to the Western Heritage Society.

The society is a civic organization which has proposed the renovation of the former Omaha Union Station into a museum and cultural center.

The railroad deeded the station to the City of Omaha in 1972.

The Round House Theater is an elaborate audiovisual exhibit created by UP for Expo 74 in Spokane, Wash., earlier this year.

The theater was used to explain the relationship of freight transporation, the environment and the development of the western United States.

The theater is being shipped from the Expo site to Omaha and is expected to arrive in about 10 days.

Western Heritage officials said the exhibit will be set up temporarily in the former dining room of Union Station.

Iran Provides Funds

Singapore (AP) — Iran has given other nations $7.7 billion in loans, aid and grants in the last 11 months, Mehli Ghaffarzadeh, Iran's vice minister for industry, said.

ICC Effect On Railroad Merger Uncertain

Omaha (AP) — A spokesman for the Union Pacific Railroad said Wednesday he is uncertain whether new conditions imposed by the Interstate Commerce Commission will delay a proposed UP merger with the Rock Island Railroad.

Barry Combs, UP public relations director in Omaha, said the parent Union Pacific Corp. in New York has declined comment on the new ICC condition requiring a private New York bank to be a party to the merger.

The ICC Tuesday added a requirement that Brown Brothers Harriman and Co., New York, largest single UP stockholder, must take part in the merger which the ICC approved three weeks ago.

The ICC's approval made clear it would be subject to certain qualifications and protections for existing railroads that would compete with the combined UP-Rock Island.

Main objector to the merger has been the Chicago and North Western Railway which said it would be faced with serious financial losses if all traffic from the UP were transferred from its Council Bluffs to Chicago lines to Rock Island lines through Iowa.

In approving the merger, the ICC indicated it would "protect traffic on other railroads," in effect guaranteeing that the Chicago and North Western would not lose the traffic it now carries to and from the UP.

Brown Brothers Harriman, which owns about 3% of UP's 22.8 million outstanding shares of common stock, is headed by descendants of E. H. Harriman who founded the modern UP in 1897.

Frank E. Barnett, UP board chairman and chief executive officer, said in New York Tuesday that the ICC ruling is so complex that it will take considerable study before UP can comment on it. Barnett also said, "It is possible that further litigation may ensue and neither the ultimate resolution of the matter nor the effective date of such resolution can be forecast at this time."

Omaha Apartment Fire May Have Been Arson

Omaha (AP) — A fire which damaged a three-story Omaha apartment building and left 17 persons injured early Wednesday is the subject of an arson investigation.

Fire officials said the blaze began about 1:30 a.m. and apparently started in an apartment on the second floor of the Jeanette Apartments.

Officials said the apartment had a strong odor of natural gas. The police said the apartment's occupant, Ramona Franks, was being questioned.

Chief Arson Investigator Horton Dahlquist said the cause may have been a gas stove explosion.

One officer said dozens of persons in the building were intoxicated. He said that when a policeman tried to warn persons in one apartment, they slammed the door in his face.

John David, owner and manager of the building, said, "They do drink. You know how apartment living is."

Residents of the building said the Franks apartment was the scene of a disturbance which brought police earlier in the evening.

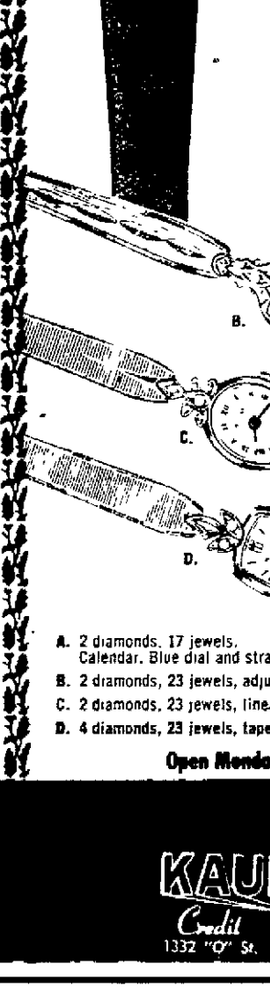

On that call, police ejected a man who later was being sought for questioning about the fire.

A fire official said the fire was confined to the Franks apartment and an adjoining one. But the smoke was so thick that many of the tenants were trapped quickly, he said.

Two of the 17 persons injured remained hospitalized late Wednesday.

Douglas Bank Held Up

Omaha (AP) — Omaha police said a lone gunman held up the Douglas County Bank in the downtown Benson area about 11:45 a.m. Wednesday, making off with an undetermined amount of cash from one teller.

Officials said a black man about 25 years old walked into the bank, then up to the teller window.

Bank President Carl Brady told reporters that the man was armed, but that he did not produce a weapon during the robbery.

Bank President Carl Brady said the man walked up to a teller window, displayed a handgun, and asked for money.

Brady said there was only one customer in the bank at the time of the holdup, but that three persons got a good look at the robber because he did not wear a mask or disguise.

The bandit was last seen jumping into large white car parked near the bank. The driver of the car, a black woman, then sped north, and out of sight.

An audit was begun to determine the amount of money taken.

A spokesman for the Omaha FBI office, which entered the case, said investigators were not ruling out the possibility that the man committing Wednesday's holdup might be the same person who held up the downtown, walk-in facility of the First National Bank of Omaha last Friday.

UP Theatre Is Donated To Society

Omaha (AP) — The Union Pacific Railroad has donated its Round House Theater to the Western Heritage Society.

The society is a civic organization which has proposed the renovation of the former Omaha Union Station into a museum and cultural center.

The railroad deeded the station to the City of Omaha in 1972.

The Round House Theater is an elaborate audiovisual exhibit created by UP for Expo 74 in Spokane, Wash., earlier this year.

The theater was used to explain the relationship of freight transporation, the environment and the development of the western United States.

The theater is being shipped from the Expo site to Omaha and is expected to arrive in about 10 days.

Western Heritage officials said the exhibit will be set up temporarily in the former dining room of Union Station.

Singapore (AP) — Iran has given other nations $7.7 billion in loans, aid and grants in the last 11 months, Mehli Ghaffarzadeh, Iran's vice minister for industry, said.

ICC Effect On Railroad Merger Uncertain

Omaha (AP) — A spokesman for the Union Pacific Railroad said Wednesday he is uncertain whether new conditions imposed by the Interstate Commerce Commission will delay a proposed UP merger with the Rock Island Railroad.

Barry Combs, UP public relations director in Omaha, said the parent Union Pacific Corp. in New York has declined comment on the new ICC condition requiring a private New York bank to be a party to the merger.

The ICC Tuesday added a requirement that Brown Brothers Harriman and Co., New York, largest single UP stockholder, must take part in the merger which the ICC approved three weeks ago.

The ICC's approval made clear it would be subject to certain qualifications and protections for existing railroads that would compete with the combined UP-Rock Island.

Main objector to the merger has been the Chicago and North Western Railway which said it would be faced with serious financial losses if all traffic from the UP were transferred from its Council Bluffs to Chicago lines to Rock Island lines through Iowa.

In approving the merger, the ICC indicated it would "protect traffic on other railroads," in effect guaranteeing that the Chicago and North Western would not lose the traffic it now carries to and from the UP.

Brown Brothers Harriman, which owns about 3% of UP's 22.8 million outstanding shares of common stock, is headed by descendants of E. H. Harriman who founded the modern UP in 1897.

Frank E. Barnett, UP board chairman and chief executive officer, said in New York Tuesday that the ICC ruling is so complex that it will take considerable study before UP can comment on it. Barnett also said, "It is possible that further litigation may ensue and neither the ultimate resolution of the matter nor the effective date of such resolution can be forecast at this time."

Omaha Apartment Fire May Have Been Arson

Omaha (AP) — A fire which damaged a three-story Omaha apartment building and left 17 persons injured early Wednesday is the subject of an arson investigation.

Fire officials said the blaze began about 1:30 a.m. and apparently started in an apartment on the second floor of the Jeanette Apartments.

Officials said the apartment had a strong odor of natural gas. The police said the apartment's occupant, Ramona Franks, was being questioned.

Chief Arson Investigator Horton Dahlquist said the cause may have been a gas stove explosion.

One officer said dozens of persons in the building were intoxicated. He said that when a policeman tried to warn persons in one apartment, they slammed the door in his face.

John David, owner and manager of the building, said, "They do drink. You know how apartment living is."

Residents of the building said the Franks apartment was the scene of a disturbance which brought police earlier in the evening.

On that call, police ejected a man who later was being sought for questioning about the fire.

A fire official said the fire was confined to the Franks apartment and an adjoining one. But the smoke was so thick that many of the tenants were trapped quickly, he said.

Two of the 17 persons injured remained hospitalized late Wednesday.

Illinois Indictment Charges Payoffs

CHICAGO (AP) — Ten former or current state legislators were among 18 persons indicted by a federal grand jury Wednesday and accused of accepting thousands of dollars in exchange for proposing special interest legislation.

In the most sweeping of three indictments, 15 persons were accused in an alleged $80,000 payoff scheme that involved legislation to increase allowable load limits on Illinois roads for the benefit of the ready-mix cement industry.

A second indictment charged three lawmakers, including one who was charged in the first indictment, with conspiracy to commit extortion and mail fraud in connection with legislation adverse to the car rental agency.

A third indictment charged one lawmaker with tax fraud.

The road legislation, if signed into law, would have benefited the ready-mix cement industry by allowing it to send out fewer trucks with larger loads, federal authorities said. State officials said at the time it would have caused roads to deteriorate more quickly and require more frequent repair.

Six persons, all members of the cement industry, were given limited immunity in exchange for their cooperation, U.S. Atty. James R. Thompson said.

The first legislator to cooperate in the investigation was Rep. Pete Pappas, a Republican of Rock Island. Named as an unindicted co-conspirator, Pappas was accused of accepting or arranging payments in both cases.

But in exchange for his cooperation, he was named only in a third indictment, charging him with income tax fraud, said Asst. U.S. Atty. Samuel Skinner.

Of the current and former legislators indicted, six are Republicans and four are Democrats.

Bribes allegedly received by legislators in the load limit scheme ranged from $200 to $4,000 each and came in two separate installments of $50,000 and $30,000, the indictment said.

A total of $1,500 changed hands in the extortion conspiracy involving the car rental legislation, Thompson said. The bill filed in the state House would have required all rented and leased vehicles to have their titles stamped to indicate commercial usage.

The indictment said that the car rental firms, which considered the legislation harassment, paid the $1,500 to have the measure killed.

"This is a case of a classic 'fetcher' bill that was introduced with no intent on the sponsor's part that the bill pass," said Thompson.

Six cement industry officials were named as unindicted co-conspirators and given a grant of limited immunity. They included Lester Crown, 49, president of Material Service Corp., one of the nation's largest building material companies.

Eight current and two former lawmakers were among those indicted. Also indicted were eight lobbyists and other cement industry representatives.

Chartered Airliner Crashes; 191 Aboard

Colombo, Sri Lanka (UPI) — A chartered Dutch jetliner carrying 191 persons, most of them Indonesian Moslems on a pilgrimage to the holy city of Mecca, crashed in rain and fog Wednesday night minutes before it was to land for refueling at Colombo Airport.

First reportes indicated all aboard perished, making the second worst air disaster in history.

Sri Lanka Radio said the plane went down in a mountainous region 80 miles east of the capital. The broadcast quoted officials as saying there apparently were no survivors.

In the Hague, Holland, Martin Schoeder, president of Martin Air, the charter airliner which operated the DC8 jetliner, said:

"On the basis of the scant information, we fare there were no survivors."

Witnesses said the plane burst into flames as it came down, its fiery wreckage scattering over the mountainous, fogged-over terrain. The radio said recovery of bodies was hampered by poor visibility.

All but two of the passengers were Indonesian Moslems en route to Mecca, Saudi Arabia, on a religious pilgrimage. A spokesman for Martin Air said the Dutch crew members included two pilots, one mechanic and four stewardesses. Also on board were two Indonesian stewardesses of Garuda Indonesian Airlines.

The crash appeared to have been the second worst in civil avaiation history, surpassed only by the crash of a Turkish Airlines DC10 outside Paris last March 10, killing 345 persons.

A company spokesman said the crash occurred about 100 miles east of Colombo on the island formerly known as Ceylon.

"The aircraft crashed in bad weather," Schoreder said. "The weather conditions also prevented helicopters from leaving hte airport for the site of the crash. They will have to wait until daylight."

Terrytown Sets Vote On Lottery

Terrytown (AP) — Like Omaha did earlier this year, officials of Terrytown are toying with the idea of a lottery.

Voters approved a constitutional amendment in 1968 allowing lotteries for charity and community betterment, should such action be approved by local voters. In 1969, enabling legislation was passed putting the law on the books.

The Department of Revenue says it has no indication of any other community in the state running a lottery.

The Terrytown Board of Trustees Tuesday night adopted an ordinance providing for a special election to be held Dec. 23, on the question of whether residents favor the lottery idea.

However, the ordinance adopted does not state for what purpose money raised by the lottery will be used.

Village Atty. Howard Olsen said if voters approve the lottery question, a management consulting firm will be hired to study the feasibility of such a venture.

There are about 120 registered voters in Terrytown.

Senate Narrowly Passes Foreign Aid Authorization

Washington (AP) — The Senate narrowly passed a $2.67-billion foreign aid authorization bill Wednesday after voting to defer a mandatory suspension of military aid to Turkey.

The compromise measure was sent to the House by a 46-45 roll call vote.

By a 55-36 roll call vote, the Senate agreed to allow President Ford to waive until mid-February a cutoff of military aid to Turkey if he determines it would foster chances for a negotiated settlement of the Greece-Turkey dispute in Cyprus.

Congress previously voted to cut off military aid to Turkey after Dec. 10 if Turkey continued to use U.S. military equipment in the occupation of about 40 per cent of Cyprus. Turkish troops invaded Cyprus in July.

The foreign aid bill, as passed, reflected a compromise between the Ford administration and senior members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. It replaced a $2.52-billion bill which was rejected by the Senate 41 to 39 last Oct. 2 after complaints by Ford that it was too meager and too restrictive.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., floor manager of the bill, successfully defended it against restrictive amendments he said would upset the compromise.

Two amendments by Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, to impose ceilings on over-all foreign assistance, except contributions through international organizations, were rejected on roll call votes.

High Price Shows Art No Hurting

LONDON (AP) — Sotheby's, the fine arts auctioneers, announced a record price of $552,000 for a painting by Georges Braque and said the sale Wednesday showed the art market was not in the doldrums.

The painting, a cubist picture entitled "Clarinet and Rum Bottle on a Mantelpiece" was sold to Cassimira Porro, identified by Sotheby's as a Milan agent for an unnamed buyer.

A spokesman added, "This sale certainly shows the art market is not in the dreadful state that some people thought."

He referred to recent reports predicting art would fail to bring high prices during the current economic troubles in Britain and other Western nations.

Illinois Indictment Charges Payoffs

CHICAGO (AP) — Ten former or current state legislators were among 18 persons indicted by a federal grand jury Wednesday and accused of accepting thousands of dollars in exchange for proposing special interest legislation.

In the most sweeping of three indictments, 15 persons were accused in an alleged $80,000 payoff scheme that involved legislation to increase allowable load limits on Illinois roads for the benefit of the ready-mix cement industry.

A second indictment charged three lawmakers, including one who was charged in the first indictment, with conspiracy to commit extortion and mail fraud in connection with legislation adverse to the car rental agency.

A third indictment charged one lawmaker with tax fraud.

The road legislation, if signed into law, would have benefited the ready-mix cement industry by allowing it to send out fewer trucks with larger loads, federal authorities said. State officials said at the time it would have caused roads to deteriorate more quickly and require more frequent repair.

Six persons, all members of the cement industry, were given limited immunity in exchange for their cooperation, U.S. Atty. James R. Thompson said.

The first legislator to cooperate in the investigation was Rep. Pete Pappas, a Republican of Rock Island. Named as an unindicted co-conspirator, Pappas was accused of accepting or arranging payments in both cases.

But in exchange for his cooperation, he was named only in a third indictment, charging him with income tax fraud, said Asst. U.S. Atty. Samuel Skinner.

Of the current and former legislators indicted, six are Republicans and four are Democrats.

Bribes allegedly received by legislators in the load limit scheme ranged from $200 to $4,000 each and came in two separate installments of $50,000 and $30,000, the indictment said.

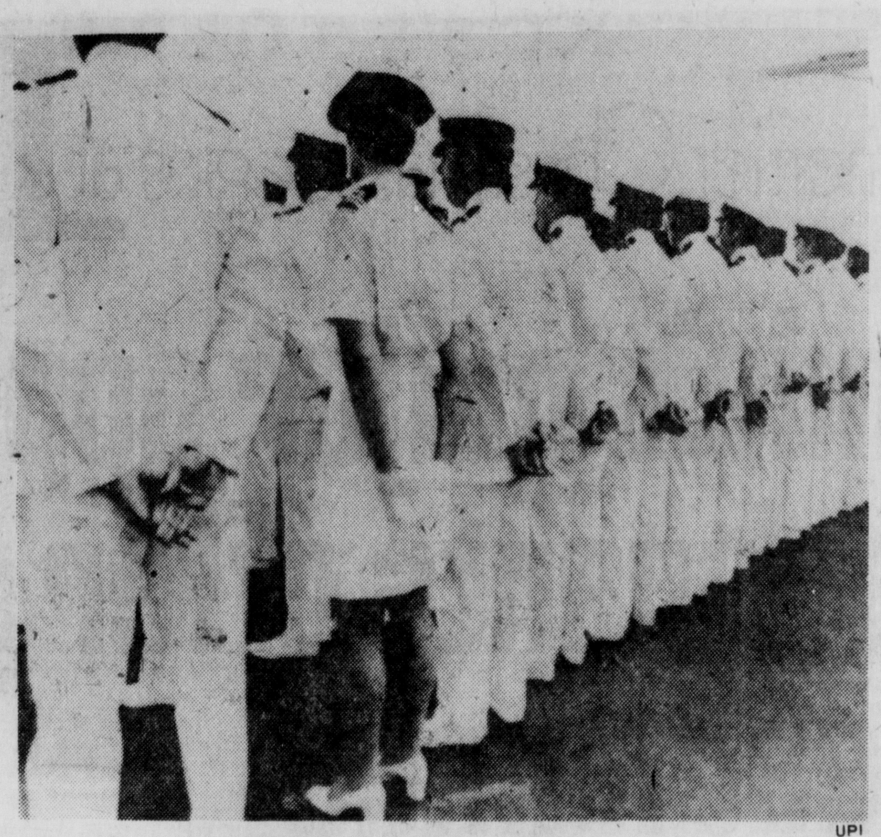

A total of $1,500 changed hands in the extortion conspiracy involving the car rental legislation, Thompson said. The bill filed in the state House would have required all rented and leased vehicles to have their titles stamped to indicate commercial usage.

The indictment said that the car rental firms, which considered the legislation harassment, paid the $1,500 to have the measure killed.

"This is a case of a classic 'fetcher' bill that was introduced with no intent on the sponsor's part that the bill pass," said Thompson.

Six cement industry officials were named as unindicted co-conspirators and given a grant of limited immunity. They included Lester Crown, 49, president of Material Service Corp., one of the nation's largest building material companies.

Eight current and two former lawmakers were among those indicted. Also indicted were eight lobbyists and other cement industry representatives.

Chartered Airliner Crashes; 191 Aboard

Colombo, Sri Lanka (UPI) — A chartered Dutch jetliner carrying 191 persons, most of them Indonesian Moslems on a pilgrimage to the holy city of Mecca, crashed in rain and fog Wednesday night minutes before it was to land for refueling at Colombo Airport.

First reportes indicated all aboard perished, making the second worst air disaster in history.

Sri Lanka Radio said the plane went down in a mountainous region 80 miles east of the capital. The broadcast quoted officials as saying there apparently were no survivors.

In the Hague, Holland, Martin Schoeder, president of Martin Air, the charter airliner which operated the DC8 jetliner, said: "On the basis of the scant information, we fare there were no survivors."

Witnesses said the plane burst into flames as it came down, its fiery wreckage scattering over the mountainous, fogged-over terrain. The radio said recovery of bodies was hampered by poor visibility.

All but two of the passengers were Indonesian Moslems en route to Mecca, Saudi Arabia, on a religious pilgrimage. A spokesman for Martin Air said the Dutch crew members included two pilots, one mechanic and four stewardesses. Also on board were two Indonesian stewardesses of Garuda Indonesian Airlines.

The crash appeared to have been the second worst in civil avaiation history, surpassed only by the crash of a Turkish Airlines DC10 outside Paris last March 10, killing 345 persons.

A company spokesman said the crash occurred about 100 miles east of Colombo on the island formerly known as Ceylon.

"The aircraft crashed in bad weather," Schoreder said. "The weather conditions also prevented helicopters from leaving hte airport for the site of the crash. They will have to wait until daylight."

Terrytown Sets Vote On Lottery

Terrytown (AP) — Like Omaha did earlier this year, officials of Terrytown are toying with the idea of a lottery.

Voters approved a constitutional amendment in 1968 allowing lotteries for charity and community betterment, should such action be approved by local voters. In 1969, enabling legislation was passed putting the law on the books.

The Department of Revenue says it has no indication of any other community in the state running a lottery.

The Terrytown Board of Trustees Tuesday night adopted an ordinance providing for a special election to be held Dec. 23, on the question of whether residents favor the lottery idea.

However, the ordinance adopted does not state for what purpose money raised by the lottery will be used.

Village Atty. Howard Olsen said if voters approve the lottery question, a management consulting firm will be hired to study the feasibility of such a venture.

There are about 120 registered voters in Terrytown.

Senate Narrowly Passes Foreign Aid Authorization

Washington (AP) — The Senate narrowly passed a $2.67-billion foreign aid authorization bill Wednesday after voting to defer a mandatory suspension of military aid to Turkey.

The compromise measure was sent to the House by a 46-45 roll call vote.

By a 55-36 roll call vote, the Senate agreed to allow President Ford to waive until mid-February a cutoff of military aid to Turkey if he determines it would foster chances for a negotiated settlement of the Greece-Turkey dispute in Cyprus.

Congress previously voted to cut off military aid to Turkey after Dec. 10 if Turkey continued to use U.S. military equipment in the occupation of about 40 per cent of Cyprus. Turkish troops invaded Cyprus in July.

The foreign aid bill, as passed, reflected a compromise between the Ford administration and senior members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. It replaced a $2.52-billion bill which was rejected by the Senate 41 to 39 last Oct. 2 after complaints by Ford that it was too meager and too restrictive.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., floor manager of the bill, successfully defended it against restrictive amendments he said would upset the compromise.

Two amendments by Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, to impose ceilings on over-all foreign assistance, except contributions through international organizations, were rejected on roll call votes.

High Price Shows Art No Hurting

LONDON (AP) — Sotheby's, the fine arts auctioneers, announced a record price of $552,000 for a painting by Georges Braque and said the sale Wednesday showed the art market was not in the doldrums.

The painting, a cubist picture entitled "Clarinet and Rum Bottle on a Mantelpiece" was sold to Cassimira Porro, identified by Sotheby's as a Milan agent for an unnamed buyer.

A spokesman added, "This sale certainly shows the art market is not in the dreadful state that some people thought."

He referred to recent reports predicting art would fail to bring high prices during the current economic troubles in Britain and other Western nations.

Job Outlook Said Better For Some

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — The job outlook for new high school and college graduates is grimmer than it has been for years. Most companies don't yet know how many entry-level jobs they'll have available next spring, but they're sure it will be a lot less than last year.

The major exceptions to this are companies in the service business with a relatively high turnover — insurance and banking, for example. And even here, job opportunities aren't expected to expand.

Nevertheless, there are always some students who will have an edge. Here's what personnel officers tell me they're looking for:

—Most of the large companies need women, and minorities of both sexes, to train for various types of supervisory jobs. It's a rare corporation that hasn't been prodded by the Equal Opportunities Employment Commission to set up an affirmative action program, agreeing to hire certain numbers of women and minorities by a certain date. Yet few are anywhere near their goals. Qualified people in these categories should have a shot at a good job this year despite the recession.

Some companies that in the past have hired only experienced people are just now beginning to recruit on campus. They've realized that if they expect to get women and minorities for upper-level jobs, they'll have to grab them young and promise them good career paths. In many cases, this involves restructuring jobs to accommodate the skill levels of college students.

—Whenever entry-level jobs are created where there were none before, it's helpful to white male students. Personnel people may plead for the trainees they need to fill their equal-opportunity quotas, but the department head who does the actual hiring may stick to his traditional preferences. And no company wants to be the target of a reverse-discrimination suit.

—White males of superior ability will still have first shot at most of the jobs. Job recruiters know they're the ones who will ascend to the top positions, no matter how equality-minded a company thinks it is.

It's mainly below this top level that applicants will feel the effects of the equal employment laws. White males of average ability will face more competition than usual although, because of their numbers, they'll still win the major percentage of jobs. It's the white male with less to offer who can no longer count on being able to edge out a more qualified female or black applicant. He might have better luck at a smaller company which is not operating under an affirmative action plan.

—Liberal arts graduates, be they men or women, will have to scratch for jobs. Many companies don't even plan to recruit at liberal arts campuses. In tight times, the preference is for the technically trained, such as engineers, accountants, and business majors. Departments traditionally filled by bright generalists, such as public relations, advertising, and personnel, have undergone severe cutbacks. One recruiter told me he advises liberal arts graduates to go to graduate school or vocational training.

—Top students will still find good jobs. Companies are always on the lookout for people of exceptional promise. But a C student will more likely be offered a job that could just as well have been filled by a high school graduate.

—Because of the increased competition from college students, high school graduates will find the job market even rougher. However, those with secretarial, clerical, commercial, mathematical, or good vocational training will have the edge. Graduates of a good secretarial school, like Katy Gibbs can be sure of finding a job. It's sometimes a good idea to apply where your mother or father works; you might get special consideration if there's no nepotism rule.

—A student who knows what he wants to do always has an edge over someone who doesn't. Companies are definitely attracted to people with career goals. They don't expect a student to know exactly what title he wants, but they do think he should be able to discuss what field he wants to work in, why, and what he thinks he can contribute.

In many cases, this involves restructuring jobs to accommodate the skill levels of college students.

—Whenever entry-level jobs are created where there were none before, it's helpful to white male students. Personnel people may plead for the trainees they need to fill their equal-opportunity quotas, but the department head who does the actual hiring may stick to his traditional preferences. And no company wants to be the target of a reverse-discrimination suit.

—White males of superior ability will still have first shot at most of the jobs. Job recruiters know they're the ones who will ascend to the top positions, no matter how equality-minded a company thinks it is.

It's mainly below this top level that applicants will feel the effects of the equal employment laws. White males of average ability will face more competition than usual although, because of their numbers, they'll still win the major percentage of jobs. It's the white male with less to offer who can no longer count on being able to edge out a more qualified female or black applicant. He might have better luck at a smaller company which is not operating under an affirmative action plan.

—Liberal arts graduates, be they men or women, will have to scratch for jobs. Many companies don't even plan to recruit at liberal arts campuses. In tight times, the preference is for the technically trained, such as engineers, accountants, and business majors. Departments traditionally filled by bright generalists, such as public relations, advertising, and personnel, have undergone severe cutbacks. One recruiter told me he advises liberal arts graduates to go to graduate school or vocational training.

—Top students will still find good jobs. Companies are always on the lookout for people of exceptional promise. But a C student will more likely be offered a job that could just as well have been filled by a high school graduate.

—Because of the increased competition from college students, high school graduates will find the job market even rougher. However, those with secretarial, clerical, commercial, mathematical, or good vocational training will have the edge. Graduates of a good secretarial school like Katy Gibbs can be sure of finding a job. It's sometimes a good idea to apply where your mother or father works; you might get special consideration if there's no nepotism rule.

—A student who knows what he wants to do always has an edge over someone who doesn't. Companies are definitely attracted to people with career goals. They don't expect a student to know exactly what title he wants, but they do think he should be able to discuss what field he wants to work in, why, and what he thinks he can contribute.

Warning System Designed To Help Shoppers

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

Price increases have hit, well, everything from soup to nuts — and then some.

More often than not, those increases come without warning. Full knowledge of another pricke hike comes as a surprise attack at the checkout counter.

Since Monday, customers at A&P Discount Foods, 4545 Vine, have had an edge on their fellow shoppers — they are alerted a full week in advance of pending price increases.

It's part of the national food chain's "Operation Aware," a program designed to help the consumer fight inflation.

Displayed prominently — and voluntarily — right inside the local supermarket is a listing of items that will bear larger price tags the following Monday.

The week's notice gives customers a chance to stock up on items at the lower prices.

Among food and grocery items listed this week — those whose prices will go up Monday — are ketchup, packaged macaroni and cheese dinners, soups, salad dressings, wax paper, toilet paper, dishwashing liquids and canned main dishes, as well as diet soft drinks, shoe polishes, and much, much more.

Manufacturers notify supermarkets of future price increases daily, said Charles Neal, manager of the local A&P. Increased shelf prices will be held off an entire week for the customer's benefit.

Not included on the list are meats, eggs or fresh produce. Prices of those foods fluctuate regularly, depending on season and availability, he said.

Listed items are identified by brand name and quantity. This week's list of future increases took three pages.

To further alert customers to forthcoming price increases, red "Be Aware" shelf tags are scattered throughout the supermarket, identifying the particular item whose price will be increased the following Monday.

Consumers who already are price conscious will be motivated to become even more so, Neal speculated.

The "Early Warning System" gives them "a little advantage . . . a chance to stockpile" those items used most frequently, he said.

Neal said he has noticed "some increased movement" of listed and red tagged items, although the store's campaign to advertise the new consumer program began only Wednesday.

"It's a little early to determine whether customers like it or feel it is helpful," said Joe Schwindt, director of sales of A&P's divisional office in Kansas City, Mo.

He said the food store chain's new program will help consumers "with their food budgeting and give them the opportunity to buy ahead."

It is a "positive effort . . . to help them in a time when things are going up by leaps and bounds," Schwindt said.

"Operation Aware" ties in with A&P's "substantial contribution to the fight against inflation through the 'Where Economy Originates' program (begun) in 1972 when all stores were converted to units offering food at lower prices with no sacrifice in A&P's traditional standards of quality" said T. G. Otto, vice president and general manager of the Kansas City division.

Along with the Early Warning System, designed to protect customers from those increasingly frequent surprise attacks at the checkout counter, A&P also has clamped a price freeze on more than 1,000 private-label products including frequently purchased items such as bread, cheese, coffee, tuna, pasta products, canned fruits and vegetables and frozen foods, Otto said.

RED TAGS . . . line A&P shelves to alert consumers to future price increases on certain items.

Non-Food Item Sales Have 'Softened'

Stick to the basics. Pinch your pennies.

Those recommendations during these inflation-ridden times are ringing truer every day.

From all indications, Americans are heeding the advice — at least in the grocery stores where they are tempted to purchase many a non-food item.

Sales of non-food items have "softened just a little," said Floyd Kuklin president of Central States Distributors which provides housewares, pots and pans, health and beauty aids, batteries, light bulbs, toys, panty hose, pet supplies, stationery to supermarkets in a nine-state area.

Traditionally, Americans have spent between six and nine cents of every grocery dollar on those and similar items on their weekly trips to the grocery stores.

But that's no longer true.

Faced with higher price tags on those items, "Mr. and Mrs. Consumer are having to think twice as to whether or not they need the item," Kuklin lamented.

That is happening to such a degree that Central States Distributors' sales for the past three months have just managed to equal those for the same period last year. Until that time, however, sales were steadily increasing, Kuklin admitted.

It's the same old song. Manufacturers are demanding higher prices from the distributors; those markups are being passed on to the consumers.

"I am very disturbed at the price increases that the national manufacturers have been making," Kuklin said. "I am somewhat dubious as to whether they (price increases) are reflective of what has been happening at the raw market level."

In addition to claims of increasing costs of overhead and wages, "manufacturers tell us their raw products have definitely gone up in price," he said, pointing to recent problems in the steel and plastics industry.

Plastic now is "becoming more plentiful," despite short supplies and higher prices earlier this year, he said.

But 10- to 35-cent toys that were plentiful in the supermarkets — and were good sellers, as well — continue to go up in price, Kuklin said. The manufacturers "are doing a good job of putting material in products they can get the most money out of."

"There is no question a good number of these manufacturers are raising their prices out of fear of another price freeze," Kuklin speculated. "They got caught last time and want to make sure it doesn't happen again."

Because prices are going up "all the way across the board," not only on selected items, "it is difficult for me to believe all these rises in prices," he said.

In fact, he is so doubtful about whether the widespread price rises are justified that he vowed to be "far stricter in the selection of merchandise than we were in the past" to supply only "what the consumer is interested in, at the price level Mr. and Mrs. Consumer are willing to pay.

We are going to look for better buys so we can pass on the savings — not just the increases — to the customer."

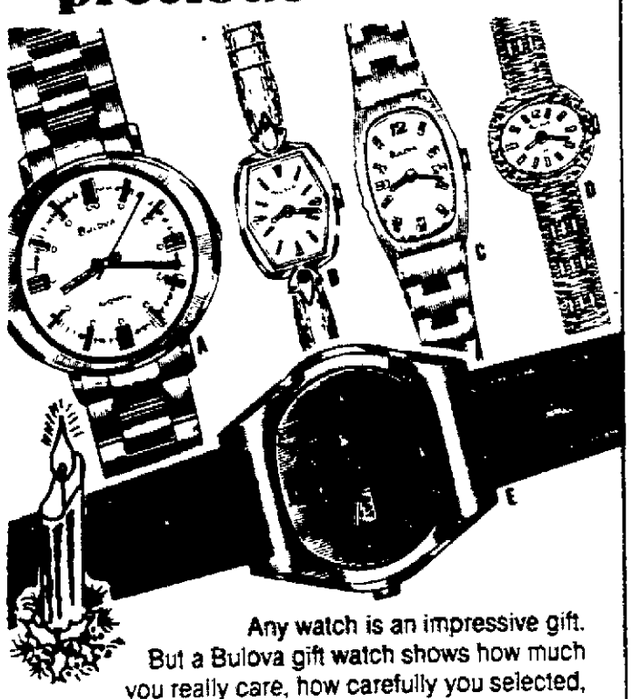

Volunteerism Big Business

Americans by the tens of millions are giving their time and money for the public good.

If there were a "gross national product" for volunteerism, a Reader's Digest article estimates it would probably total $50 billion a year. There are now some seven million voluntary groups in the U.S., and from 50 to 70 million people contribute their time to worthy causes. Many of these volunteers come from two groups which frequently have a rare combination of time and talent — students and retired people.

Utility Bills Overweight?

Put your house on a low calorie energy diet.

Here is a diet plan for your home. This is not a crash diet, but one designed to reduce strain on your budget, yet provide you with the comfort and convenience that should be yours with clean, low-cost electricity.

1. Proper Insulation

The right insulation can save you over 15 percent on fuel bills. You should have 6 inches of insulation between the joists supporting the ceiling and 3 inches in exterior walls.

2. Weather Stripping

Check all doors, windows and corners. If there's room for any air to come through...seal it. Remember...a 1/4-inch gap at the base of a standard 36-inch door is equal to a 9-square-inch hole in the side of your house. There are easy-to-install felt and foam rubber products to draftproof doorways. Keep a little rope putty on hand for those other small cracks.

3. Windows

Insulated glass windows or storm windows keep cold air out and heat inside. These windows will pay for themselves in lower heating costs.

4. Thermostats

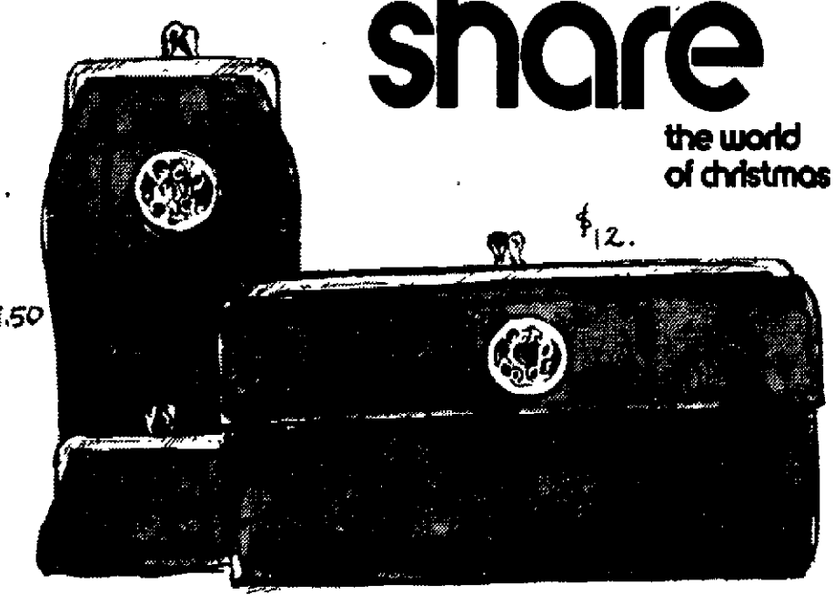

Location is important. Thermostats should be mounted level on inside wall in a draft-free spot, away from lamps and other heat-producing appliances. Clean them yearly by removing cover and gently blowing away the dust. Don't turn your thermostat way down for short periods. Frequent changes cause heating bills to increase more than the comfort index. A slight reduction at night may result in some savings and more comfortable sleeping conditions.

These are but a few of the energy calorie counters that you may use. If you'd like more, drop in at your Lincoln Electric System's Business Office and ask for "Energy Conserving Hints".

Writer Favors Attention, Not Money

By KAREN PETERSON

Asked whether her characters are "likeable" or not, Lillian Hellman replied, "Oh, who the hell cares . . . No writer has the right to 'like' or 'dislike' his characters. He just creates them. It's really none of my business to judge if they're likeable or not . . ."

The answer from "America's greatest female playwright" came during a recent audience-participation event at Washington, D.C.'s Smithsonian Institution.

Her initial attitude that night brings to mind an anecdote from her memoirs. In "An Unfinished Woman," someone asks her, "What are you made of, Lilly?" She replies, "Pickling spice and nothing nice."

At first, that evening at the Smithsonian, she was hostile, rude, and as the critic who introduced her noted, "easily bored." But members of the audience had come intending to adore the weather-beaten Hellman, and she relaxed and softened under their praise. Perhaps it's as she herself has written: Writers care less for dollars than attention.

Hellman merits attention. Her sometimes controversial, always disturbing plays have become classics — "The Children's Hour," "Toys in the Attic," "Watch on the Rhine," "The Little Foxes," etc.

And her personal life, glimpsed in the autobiographical works "An Unfinished Woman" and "Pentimento," is a spider's web of famous names and places, unpopular "causes," humor, deep passion — and pain. In them, she mentions her early divorce, the back-alley abortion, the wild years of success as a New York playwright and a Hollywood screenwriter. The years of booze and frustration are there, too.

Hellman has seen it and done it. Drawn by a need to find a "truth" and to "make some sense of it" she went to Spain's Civil War; to Russia's front lines in World War II, and to the German underground fighting Adolph Hitler.

She also went a few rounds with the House on Un-American activities committee during the McCarthy era, refusing to discuss the lives of her friends.

Woven throughout her career are names — the people who loved and hated her, bled with her during a tumultuous life — Dorothy Parker, Ernest Hemingway, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Theodore Roethke, Robert Lowell, Errol Flynn, Simone Signoret, Talullah Bankhead, and many others.

But most important of all there was Dashiell Hammett, who wrote "The Maltese Falcon" and the "Thin Man" series. Their affair lasted 30 years, until his death.

Hellman laughed when his name came up. She said, "We never married because we thought we'd never stay together, and when we did stay together, it didn't seem worthwhile . . . If people call me 'liberated,' then that's fine. But each generation thinks it's doing something no one ever did before, when it's been done for hundreds of years."

Pressure-cooker living has left Hellman nicotine-stained, scarred, and resilient — looking, as someone once said, rather like the prow head of a whaling ship.

She is also rather bitter about the crucible of her fame: the theater. She commented, "I don't want to hear another word about money and the theater. I don't want to depend on three or four people to like or dislike my work . .. The theater has gone downhill in the last ten years, in part because it deserved to. Movies have been far more remarkable . . ."

In "An Unfinished Woman," she describes the theater as ". . . a world that is not my world, although it has been my life . . . I have wandered through it as if I were a kind of stranger ... maybe my own nature does not fit the rushing strong tones of the theater, although certainly my own tones are often shrill; maybe because I am not good at collaboration the essence of the theater; maybe because I like fame, but don't like and am no good at, its requirements; or maybe vanity of any kind other than my own seems to me at first funny and at last boring. But most of all, the theater is not a natural world for those who must question whatever is meant by glamour . . ."

Such honesty is a Hellman trademark, though she is not a person who tells all.

A question: "Do you have a work in progress?"

Answer: "If I had, I wouldn't tell you. This business of talking is very dangerous for a writer. You hear many who are better at talking than writing . . . To make severe plans is a very wrong idea for a writer. Let the year carry you, I believe in spitballing one's career. '

After the Smithsonian program, some of her idolaters noted that Hellman's occasional rudeness seemed like part of an act, a defense mechanism. After all, she had admitted, "Of course, I'm frightened. Most people are. The question is what you DO with the fright. It would be a kind of insanity NOT to be frightened, and I'm not insane yet."

Once upon a time, she called herself "overproud, oversensitive, overdaring because I was shy and frightened. Ah, what a case can be made for vanity in the shy. . ."

But perhaps Hellman wouldn't want any of this to be taken too seriously. Stopping in the middle of her own remarks, she reported, "As Sam Goldwyn once said to me, you should take all this with a grain of sauce . . ."

The bidding:

Opening lead — queen of hearts.

Assume you're in six spades and West leads the queen of hearts, which you duck, followed by the jack.

You ruff, of course, and the outcome appears to depend solely on finding the clubs divided 3-3. In that case, you'd be able to discard one of dummy's diamonds on your deuce of clubs and so make the slam.

But experience tells you that a 3-3 break occurs in only one deal out of three—36 deals in 100, to be more exact—and this is not a healthy enough prospect to look forward to. So you start to look for ways and means of supplementing your chances—without, of course, relinquishing the possibility of a 3-3 break.

Actually, this is not a difficult chore. You can improve your prospects substantially by allowing for the possibility of a squeeze. All you need is for the defender with the greater club length to also have the king of diamonds.

In line with this, you draw two rounds of trumps, ruff the king of hearts, cash the ace of diamonds, and cross to dummy with your last trump to produce this position:

You play the 10-7 of trumps, discarding both your diamonds, at which point West suddenly acquires a king-sized headache trying to find two comfortable discards. He can spare the nine of diamonds, all right, but his next discard will make everyone at the table happy except East and West.

Fewer Graduates Attending College

The labor force status of 1973 high school graduates and dropouts is the subject of a Special Labor Force Report in a recent issue of the Monthly Labor Review.

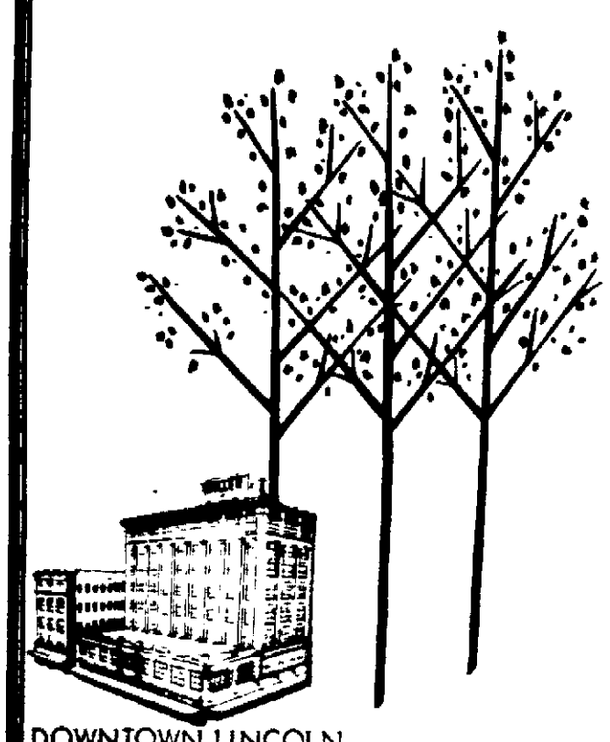

The study shows a decline in the percentage of high school graduates going on to college between 1970, when it was 55 percent for men and 49 percent for women, and 1973, when it was 50 percent for men and 43 for women.

About a third of the 1973 high school graduates not in college or working, and 10 percent of the 1972-73 dropouts not working were in special schools. Almost 36 percent of the women graduates not in the work force were in special schools (business schools, trade schools, etc.) but only 4.4 percent of the women dropouts were in such schools. About 70 percent of the female dropouts not in the labor force were 16 or 17 years old; 40 percent were married.

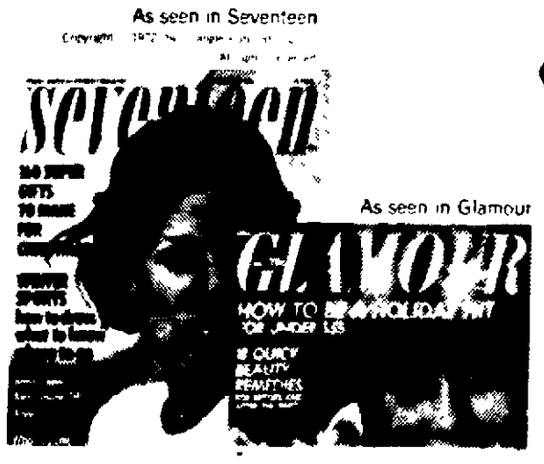

The study also reports on the college enrollment of these young people.

Writer Favors Attention, Not Money

By KAREN PETERSON

Asked whether her characters are "likeable" or not, Lillian Hellman replied, "Oh, who the hell cares . . . No writer has the right to 'like' or 'dislike' his characters. He just creates them. It's really none of my business to judge if they're likeable or not . . ."

The answer from "America's greatest female playwright" came during a recent audience-participation event at Washington, D.C.'s Smithsonian Institution.

Her initial attitude that night brings to mind an anecdote from her memoirs. In "An Unfinished Woman," someone asks her, "What are you made of, Lilly?" She replies, "Pickling spice and nothing nice."

At first, that evening at the Smithsonian, she was hostile, rude, and as the critic who introduced her noted, "easily bored." But members of the audience had come intending to adore the weather-beaten Hellman, and she relaxed and softened under their praise. Perhaps it's as she herself has written: Writers care less for dollars than attention.

Hellman merits attention. Her sometimes controversial, always disturbing plays have become classics — "The Children's Hour," "Toys in the Attic," "Watch on the Rhine," "The Little Foxes," etc.

And her personal life, glimpsed in the autobiographical works "An Unfinished Woman" and "Pentimento," is a spider's web of famous names and places, unpopular "causes," humor, deep passion — and pain. In them, she mentions her early divorce, the back-alley abortion, the wild years of success as a New York playwright and a Hollywood screenwriter. The years of booze and frustration are there, too.

Hellman has seen it and done it. Drawn by a need to find a "truth" and to "make some sense of it" she went to Spain's Civil War; to Russia's front lines in World War II; and to the German underground fighting Adolph Hitler.

She also went a few rounds with the House on Un-American activities committee during the McCarthy era, refusing to discuss the lives of her friends.

Woven throughout her career are names — the people who loved and hated her, bled with her during a tumultuous life — Dorothy Parker, Ernest Hemingway, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Theodore Roethke, Robert Lowell, Errol Flynn, Simone Signoret, Talullah Bankhead, and many others.

But most important of all there was Dashiell Hammett, who wrote "The Maltese Falcon" and the "Thin Man" series. Their affair lasted 30 years, until his death.

Hellman laughed when his name came up. She said, "We never married because we thought we'd never stay together, and when we did stay together, it didn't seem worthwhile . . . If people call me 'liberated,' then that's fine. But each generation thinks it's doing something no one ever did before, when it's been done for hundreds of years."

Pressure-cooker living has left Hellman nicotine-stained, scarred, and resilient — looking, as someone once said, rather like the prow head of a whaling ship.

She is also rather bitter about the crucible of her fame: the theater. She commented, "I don't want to hear another word about money and the theater. Request 'Friends' To Call

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I am a grandmother who met a young couple at the home of a mutual friend. I liked the young man, but his wife is simply awful! She talks incessantly and never says anything. She is also a phony. She claims to "love" ballet, art, opera, literature — you name it, and she's an "expert" — but after listening to her for a few minutes, it's apparent she doesn't know much. She is also pushy and her never-ending chatter is punctuated with obscenities, which I detest.

This couple dropped in on me without phoning first. I was shocked, but didn't want to be rude. I should have been, because they dropped in on me again, and stayed and stayed and stayed. Then they told me they had bought property very near me because they loved the area!

Abby, how do I tell them to please leave me alone? I could tolerate an occasional visit, but when they become neighbors I will be robbed of my cherished privacy. Should I tell him? Or her? And how do I phrase it? I can't say, "Please forget that you know me. I cannot stand you!"

ORANGE, CALIF.

DEAR ORANGE: Tell THEM that you are not the "dropping in" kind of neighbor and do not appreciate folks who drop in without calling first. Admit to being a bit of a "nut" on the subject to the point of being thought anti-social — but do let them know you are not kidding.

DEAR ABBY: My husband loves to hunt, and he gets positively rabid when anyone mentions any kind of gun control.

I've always hated guns, and think that handguns should not be manufactured except for use by law enforcers.

The other day my husband came home with bumper stickers on our new car. They said: "Guns don't kill people. People kill people."

I finally had to agree that those bumper stickers made a lot of sense. No?

SOOTHED IN SYRACUSE

DEAR SOOTHED: Prepare to become unsoothed. That bumper sticker should read, "Guns don't kill people, but people with guns kill people." Run that through your old rifle barrel a couple of times.

DEAR ABBY: Like so many others, I never expected to be writing a "Dear Abby" letter because I thought I had the perfect marriage.

I would like to tell every wife whose husband works away from home to go with him because if she doesn't, another woman is waiting to step into her shoes.

My husband worked away from home for the last three years, but he drove 100 miles extra every day so he could spend every night at home with me.

Well, six months ago he started to call me around 5 P.M. saying he was too tired to make the drive home. Finally, he confessed that he met another woman and he thinks he's in love with her. He says he can't make up his mind between us, so we are sharing him.

I can't tell you what I have been going through, Abby. I don't know whether to tell him to stay with her and not come back, or what. My best friend says I should kick him out. My sister says to share him until he gets tired of her.

If I ever get my husband back I will be like Ruth in the Bible. What should I do?

J. IN FLORIDA

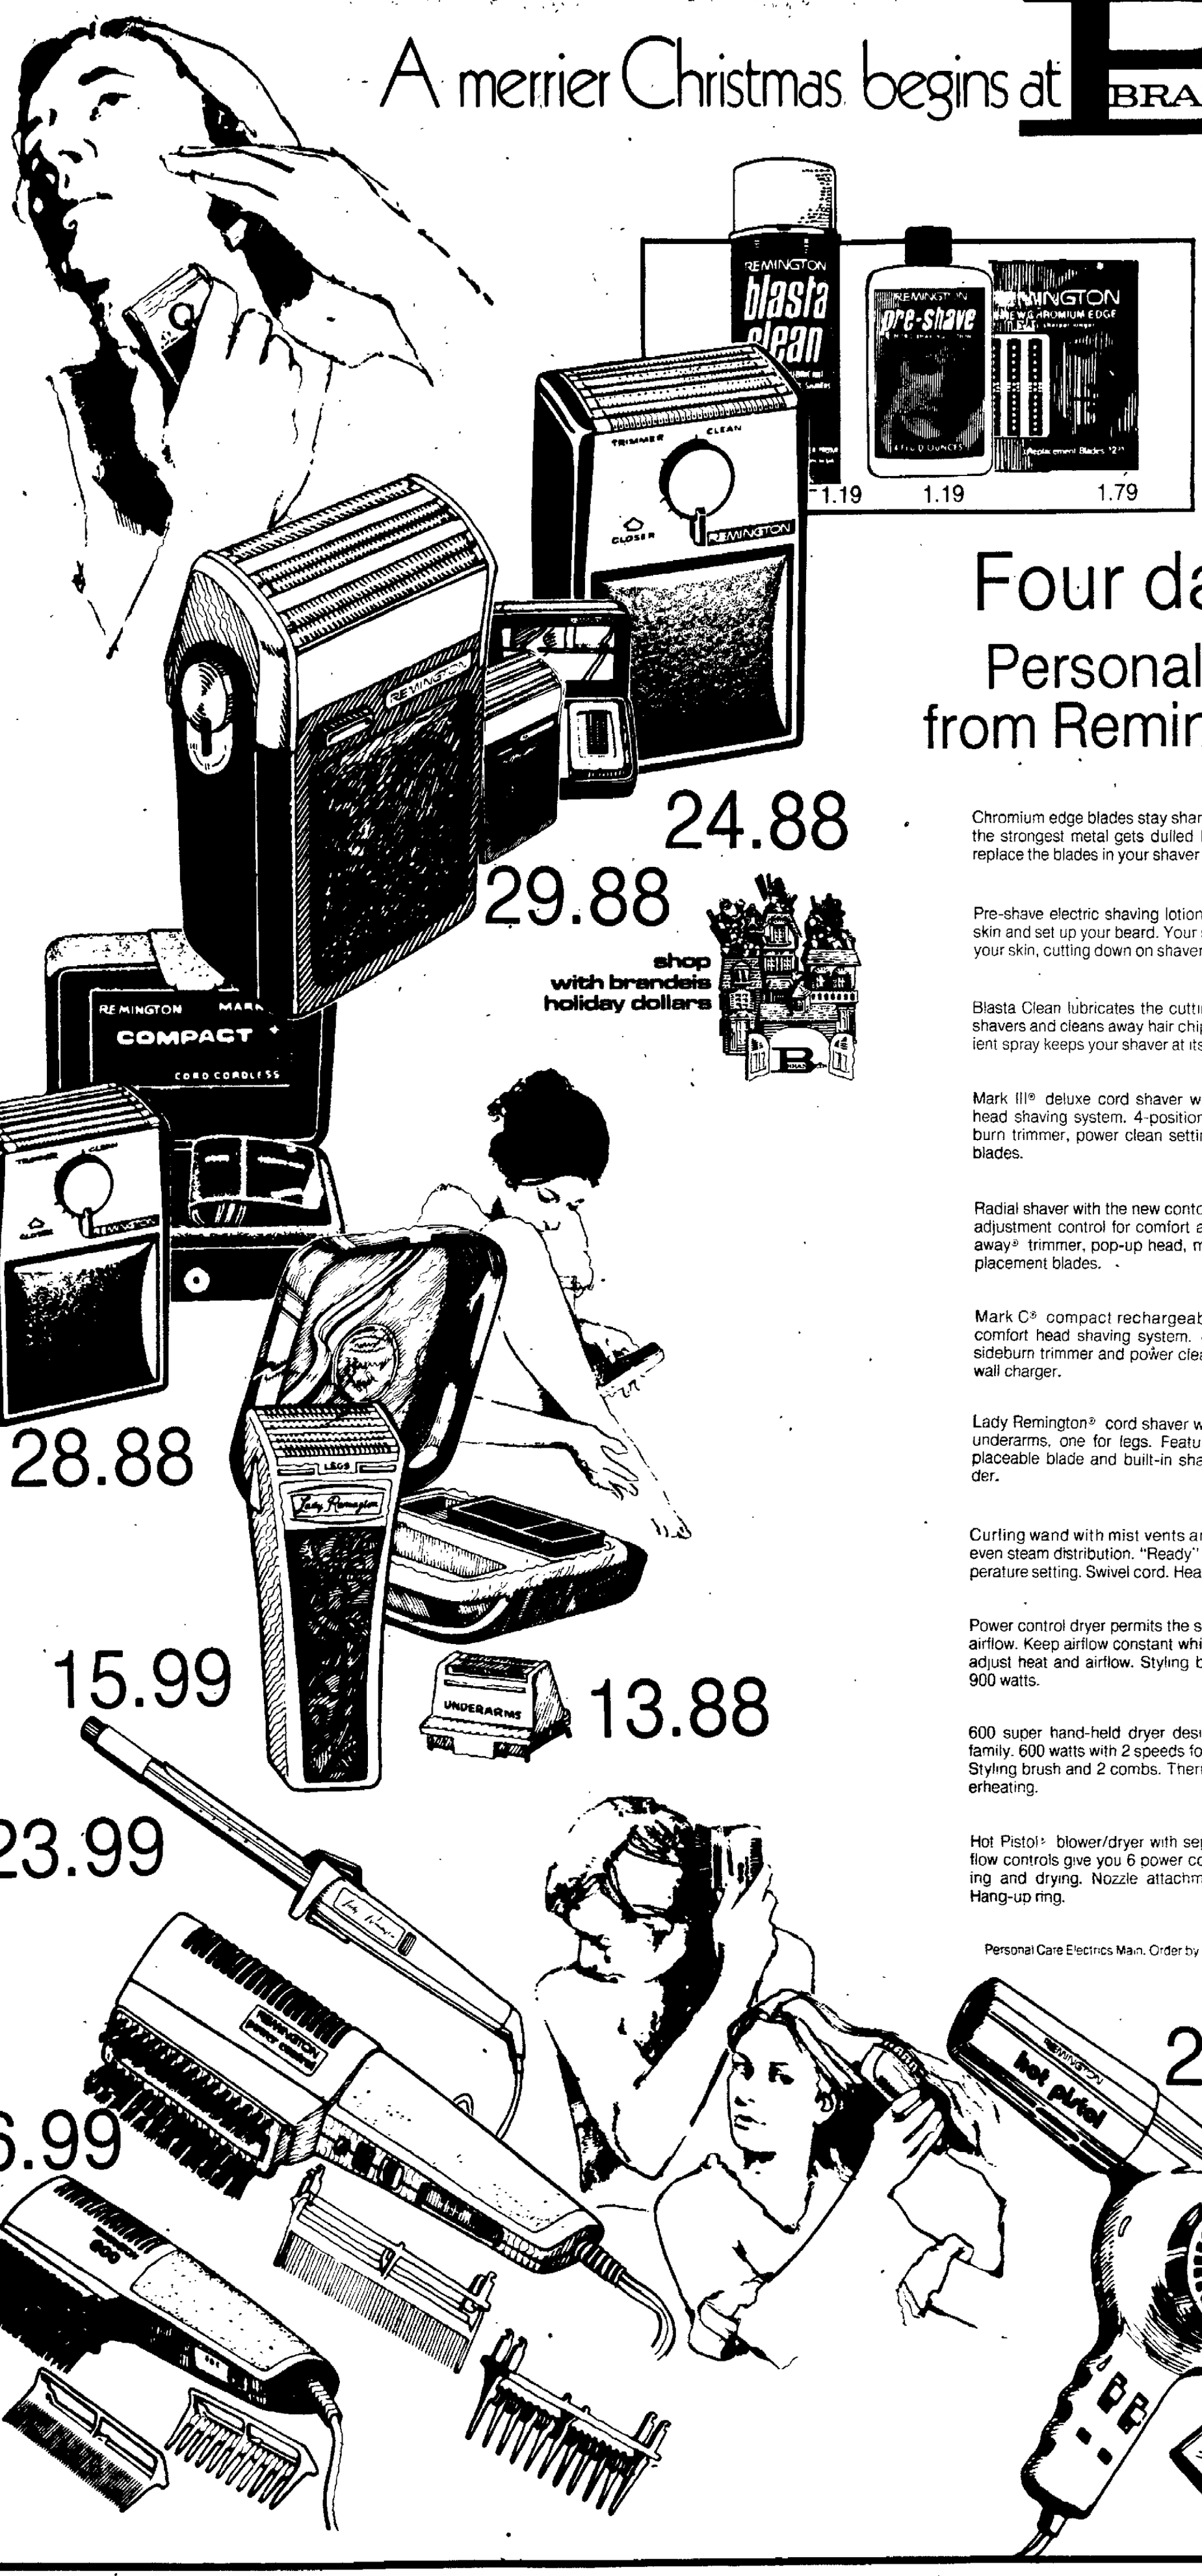

DEAR J: Don't make any decisions now that you might later regret. You don't say how long you've been married, or if there are children. (That could make a difference.) Get some counseling. This is too heavy to handle alone, and friends tend to tell you what they think you want to hear.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "EMBARRASSED NOW": My medical experts inform me that Herpes 2 should not (repeat NOT) be classified as a venereal disease. Although it is possible to contract it through sexual relations, it is by no means the ONLY way. No need for you to be embarrassed.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Aims Vary For Newly Elected State Senators

By ERIC KRAMER
Associated Press Writer

As the 12 newly elected state senators attended their first legislative function Wednesday, some said they would seek reforms in the legislative process, others were preparing to push ambitious pieces of legislation and others "just wanted to get their feet on the ground."

The new senators, who represent a full quarter of the 49-member body, met with their fellow senators Wednesday at a Legislative Council session.

Most of them are unknown in Nebraska political circles and many have never held public office.

The 12 are:

— Jerry Koch, a Ralston resident employed by the Omaha Suburban Area Council of Schools. He replaces retiring speaker Richard Proud. He said he wanted to reform the legislative process and the operation of all government in Nebraska. He said the Legislature should devote entire days to public hearings on bills instead of holding all of the hearings in the afternoons.

He said he also wanted to send a constitutional amendment to the people again which would remove the lieutenant governor as presiding officer of the Legislature. Koch said, although the amendment was defeated by the people last May, with better understanding of the amendment, the people would put the lieutenant governor in the executive branch where he belongs.

— Douglas Bereuter, a lifetime resident of Utica, who defeated Walter Epke of York. He is a consultant for the states of Kansas and Colorado in urban affairs and state and regional planning. He also works with local governments.

He said he had promised to introduce a bill to limit corporate farming.

Bereuter said he had no particular interest in changing legislative procedures, but favored Sen. Eugene Mahoney's proposed constitutional amendment which would allow the Legislature to meet officially in December to organize.

— Tom Fitzgerald, who retired after 32 years with the Omaha Post Office. He takes over the seat of Duke Snyder who did not seek re-election after serving one term in the Unicameral.

Fitzgerald said he was just there to get educated because the Legislature would be "a new career for me."

— Warren Swigart, an Omaha real estate broker and former city councilman. He replaces David Stahmer who decided not to run for re-election to the Legislature. Swigart said his experience in city government made him vitally interested in recreation, sewer construction funds, ecology and street building. He said he grew up on a farm and was very much interested in increasing irrigation.

Swigart said he was also interested in continued imporvement in the treatment of the retarded, mentally ill and handicapped. He said the Legislature has "just scratched the surface" on rehabilitation of the criminal.

— George Burrows, an Adams farmer. He replaces Fred Carstens who retired after 10 years in the Unicameral. Burrows said he was hesitant to comment unfavorably on his fellow senators and the operation of the Unicameral because he wanted their support for legislation to shift the support of public schools from property taxes to income taxes.

— Larry Stoney, of Omaha, who has been an employe of Mutual of Omaha for 13 years. He replaces Richard Fellman who was appointed to the Legislature in 1972 and did not seek re-election.

Stoney said he thought there was a lot of "individual picayunishness" between Senators that interfered with the legislative process.

— Ron Cope of Kearney, who replaces Gerald Stromer who ran for Congress. He is a longtime operator of a Kearney retail shoe business. He said he would decline to comment on the Legislature until he had more experience.

He said his primary concerns would be agriculture, education and business.

— Donald Dworak, who has spent six years as a Columbus insurance and real estate man. He replaces Herb Nore of Genoa who retired after ten years in the Legislature.

He said he thought the Legislature looks at too many bills and the number should be reduced if it could be done "without stiffling the voice of the people."

— Walter George of Blair, who defeated Blair Richendifer of Walthill. He taught political science, humanities and foreign languages at Dana College for eight years. He went on leave of absence and will be working part-time for the Huntel (telephone) Systems during the session.

He was not happy with the last session of the Legislature in some respects. He said there was "not enough leadership."

— Myron Rumery, a retired agricultural researcher from North Platte, replaces J. James Waldron who ran for Congress. He said he has spent most of his life in agriculture and it would be his primary interest in the Legislature.

— Jack Mills of Big Springs, who replaces Ramey Whitney who retired. He is a wheat farmer involved in the grain and fertilizer business. He said he was primarily interested in legislation which would protect water resources and allow new irrigation wells to be drilled where feasible.

— William E. Nichol, a credit bureau manager and Scotts Bluff County commissioner. Carpenter has challenged the election, but Nichol will be seated unless Carpenter wins in court.

Marvel Says Budget To Be Key Challenge

By The Associated Press

Putting together a workable government budget in the face of double digit inflation and a recession will be a key challenge facing the 1975 Legislature, State Sen. Richard Marvel of Hastings said Wednesday.

Marvel, chairman of the Unicameral's Budget Committee, addressed fellow senators of the Legislative Council.

The Council met to receive interim study reports compiled by legislative committees.

Each of the reports was automatically accepted.

The Legislature officially convenes Jan. 8. Wednesday's session was the first exposure to legislative process for 12 newly-elected senators.

Putting together a budget and government programs "that fit the pocketbooks of the people of the state is a challenge to all of us," Marvel said.

He alluded briefly to report his committee has or will submit reports, including those that would require competitive bids on contracts for state services.

Legislation will be offered to "make it next to impossible for people to benefit from state government (contracts) without being exposed to competition" Marvel said.

Marvel, who recently lost a bid to unseat Democratic Gov. J. James Exon, developed the legislation after charges that the state leased a building for Labor Department offices in Omaha under comparatively closed circumstances.

Marvel has accused the Exon Administration of "cronyism" in connection with that lease.

State Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood said his Agriculture Committee had reports on land use and possible strengthening of anti-trust laws.

He reported on his investigation into alleged manipulation of live and retail meat prices by major chain stores, which he said have contributed to "the general collapse of the free enterprise system."

Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha said a report by his Government, Military Affairs and Veterans Committee would probably lead to some "fireworks."

Chambers said county sheriffs should be hired by county boards rather than elected.

He said provisions that allow sheriffs to receive fees for performance of some duties should be eliminated.

Sen. Hasebroock Named To Head Retirement Panel

The executive board of the Legislative Council Wednesday appointed Sen. William Hasebroock of West Point as chairman of the Nebraska Retirement Systems Committee.

It is the only legislative committee appointment handled by the board. The other chairmen are appointed by the Legislature.

The executive board appointed Sen. Leslie Stull of Alliance too fill the vacant seat on the committee.

Carpenter Appeal Filed By Attorney

Gering (AP) — As expected, Harry Meister, an attorney for former State Sen. Terry Carpenter, showed up at the Scotts Bluff County Courthouse here Wednesday afternoon to file a "petition on appeal" contesting Carpenter's loss to William Nichol in the race for the 48th District seat in the Unicameral.

Carpenter's petition names Nichol and Ben Wilson, the third candidate in the race, as defendants and contestees, while naming himself as the plaintiff and contestor.

In addition to the contesting petition, Meister also filed a motion asking the court to act on the issue within 15 days.

The action asks the court to strike down two state statutes regarding the casting of write in ballots as being unconstitutional.

Carpenter appeared to be a three-vote victor over Nichol after the initial count of the ballots.

However, Nichol requested a recount, and at its completion, Nichol was the winner by 68 votes. Nichol has been certified as the winner by the State Canvassing Board.

Carpenter is challenging the disqualification of between 80 and 100 votes which he feels were cast for him.

The votes were thrown out by Secretary of State Allen Beermann because voters failed to include a first name or initial, or misspelled Carpenter's last name.

In essence, Carpenter claims a voter's intent should count, not his apptitude for spelling.

If Carpenter cannot reclaim the disqualified votes, the petition asks that the Nov. 5 election be declared null and void, and that a new election be held.

Contacted after the filing, Scotts Bluff County District Court Judges Alfred J. Kortum and Theodore R. Feidler said they will disqualify themselves from hearing the case. Both said one reason for the disqualification is that Nichol is a Scotts Bluff County Commissioner, and the Board of Commissioners acts on claims and drafts presented by the court. Both also voted in the election.

District Court Judge Robert R. Moran of Alliance has been asked to handle the case, but a hearing was not immediately scheduled.

It is too late this week for Moran to change his court schedule, and he will be out of town next week. However, Moran told Feidler and Kortum that if they could preside over the cases he has scheduled Dec. 16, he could hear the Carpenter case that day.

Hill Threatens To File Suit In NPPD Directors Contest

North Platte (AP) — Now there is a threat of still another challenge of the results in the state's Nov. 5 general election.

Incumbent Jack Hill of Ogallala, the representative of Subdivision 4 on the Nebraska Public Power District Board of Directors, says the Lincoln County Clerk may have done him out of re-election.

Hill apparently lost to Jim Orr of North Platte by 115 votes out of more than 17,000 ballots cast.

Hill has threatened to file suit in Lincoln County District Court on grounds that the County Clerk did not prepare the ballots according to state statutes.

Hill said state law requires that candidate names be rotated precinct-by-precinct.

However, Hill claims that in Lincoln County, Orr's name appeared first in eight precincts in North Platte, and 10 others in rural areas.

Although Hill said his name appeared first in an equal number of precincts in both the city and rural areas, he alleges that Orr's name appeared first on a total of about 1,300 more ballots than his.

Aims Vary For Newly Elected State Senators

By ERIC KRAMER
Associated Press Writer

As the 12 newly elected state senators attended their first legislative function Wednesday, some said they would seek reforms in the legislative process, others were preparing to push ambitious pieces of legislation and others "just wanted to get their feet on the ground."

The new senators, who represent a full quarter of the 49-member body, met with their fellow senators Wednesday at a Legislative Council session.

Most of them are unknown in Nebraska political circles and many have never held public office.

The 12 are:

— Jerry Koch, a Ralston resident employed by the Omaha Suburban Area Council of Schools. He replaces retiring speaker Richard Proud. He said he wanted to reform the legislative process and the operation of all government in Nebraska. He said the Legislature should devote entire days to public hearings on bills instead of holding all of the hearings in the afternoons.

He said he also wanted to send a constitutional amendment to the people again which would remove the lieutenant governor as presiding officer of the Legislature. Koch said, although the amendment was defeated by the people last May, with better understanding of the amendment, the people would put the lieutenant governor in the executive branch where he belongs.

— Douglas Bereuter, a lifetime resident of Utica, who defeated Walter Epke of York. He is a consultant for the states of Kansas and Colorado in urban affairs and state and regional planning. He also works with local governments.

He said he had promised to introduce a bill to limit corporate farming.

Bereuter said he had no particular interest in changing legislative procedures, but favored Sen. Eugene Mahoney's proposed constitutional amendment which would allow the Legislature to meet officially in December to organize.

— Tom Fitzgerald, who retired after 32 years with the Omaha Post Office. He takes over the seat of Duke Snyder who did not seek re-election after serving one term in the Unicameral.

Fitzgerald said he was just there to get educated because the Legislature would be "a new career for me."

Oak's Christmas Gift Early, Or Is It Late?

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Oak — Lugging a 133-ton steel bridge in his pack, Santa is arriving three weeks early for this Nuckolls County village.

Or is the old boy five years late?

Not since spring of 1969, when the Little Blue railroad bridge here was washed out by flooding has a train crossed the river. For three and a half years there was limited service up to the washout, but in December, 1972, Chicago and North Western abandoned the entire branch line, which served 13 towns between Seward and Superior.

The "new bridge," actually a used 100-ft. structure moved from Mapleton, Iowa, is an acquisition of the Great Plains Railway. That successor private line has been operating south of the bridge — actually 12 miles between Nora and Superior — since last June.

"Hopefully by the end of the year we will be operating the entire 85-mile length of the line," said Ira Schreiber of Lincoln, vice president.

By coincidence, Great Plains this week is resuming service to towns north of the bridge with two recently acquired locomotives. Officials anticipate it will require three weeks to install the bridge, which was disassembled before shipping.

The used bridge had been on another CNW branch line which also was abandoned by the company. The replacement project will total about $110,000.

Santa and some Union Pacific helpers are having a whole bagful of problems, incidentally, in getting the huge package actually on site. Upon arrival in Davenport Tuesday, it was discovered that the bridge "had been shipped backwards."

Schreiber explained that steel bridges are built with one end fixed and one "rolling" so as to permit expansion and contraction.

Shipped on three rail cars, the bridge sections had to be returned to Hastings so the cars could be reversed. They will now properly comply with engineering plans once the consignment reaches Oak.

However, that may well take the rest of this week. UP agent R. J. Ellis of Carleton explained that the cars were turned at Hastings but it was then discovered that nobody had officially weighed the massive bridge.

The three cars were thus deployed to special scales at Marysville, Kan.

Packer Suggests Killing Of Cows For Stockpiling

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Norfolk — A proposal to use federal funds to pay for the slaughter of at least two million cows, process them into canned meat for use in food programs or as a stockpile of beef in the event of shortages drew mixed reactions from livestock feeders attending the annual convention of the Nebraska Livestock Feeders Association.

Paul Engler, a vice president of Iowa Beef Packers of Dakota City, made the suggestion in an address before the convention Wednesday.

Engler said his proposal was strictly a personal idea he wanted to try on the feeders association for their reactions.

Engler would have all packing plants concentrate on killing beef cows for a two-week period which he indicated would allow for the processing of approximately two million cows.

The meet would be processed and perhaps then frozen for long term storage, he said.

Have To Do Something

Melvin Kuska, feeder from Fairmont, expressed interest in the idea but said, "I would hate to see beef stockpiled like grain was several years ago. It could be held over the heads of the industry as a price depressing factor. One thing is certain, however. We simply have to do something about those old cows which need to be removed from the nation's cattle herd."

The association took no direct public action on the proposal, but did suggest that meat be included in programs to feed the hungry at home and abroad.

The cost of such a program would probably exceed $200 million without paying any more than minimal prices for the old cows, according to farmers attending the meeting.

Officers Elected

Herb Albers Jr. of Wisner was elected president of the feeders association. William Krejci of Fairmont, was named first vice president; Rowland McClymont of Holdrege, second vice president; and Paul Johnson of Schuyler, secretary-treasurer.

Larry Schramm of Papillion was named the organization's representative on the Beef Industry Foundation with Jim Beller of Lindsay as an alternate.

Representing Nebraska in the National Livestock Feeders Association will be Woodrow Collins of Meadow Grove; Albers, McClymont, Krecji and Wayne Hendrickson of Kearney.

Special tribute was paid to Virgil Mulligan of the U.S. Department of Agriculture news service for his work in improving livestock market reports.

The organization voted to hold its 1975 convention at York.

The feeders passed 29 resolutions which they made public and apparently discussed a dozen or so additional instructions to their board of directors at a meeting closed to the press.

The group resolved to:

— Support for President Ford's action against Canadian beef exports to the U.S.

— Oppose restrictions on the export of agricultural commodities.

— Request that subsidization of exports of animal feeds, agricultural chemicals and fertilizer not be made at credit terms more favorable to foreign buyers than those available to domestic users.

— Request tighter enforcement of free market laws.

— Request packers to improve their efficiency and cut costs of processing red meats.

— Request increased student instruction in the field of merchandising and marketing of agricultural products at the Institute of Agriculture, University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

— Request that packers stop using the yellow sheet day-of-kill basis when buying cattle for future delivery.

— Call for the establishment of scales equipped with printing devices on monorail scales used for purchasing livestock on a dressed weight basis from farmers.

— Call for research and development of a mechanical method for grading beef carcasses.

— Call for the appointment of knowledgeable persons to the newly created Commodity Exchange Commission for the purpose of enforcing laws to curtail instability in the trading of live cattle and hog futures.

— Call for a limit of one redelivery per lot of cattle in futures trading, monthly contracts to enable delivery of cattle each month of the year, four delivery days per week and a daily limit of $1 per hundredweight in price changes on livestock futures contract.

— Request a new tax law to discourage tax shelter investment in livestock production.

— Ask for legislation to broaden the tax base in the state for the purpose of education.

— Request state tax officials use a depreciation tax schedule similar to the one used by the U.S. Internal Revenue Service for use in taxing farm machinery.

— Request tighter laws governing the exercise of imminent domain.

— Oppose any increase in interest rates under state usury laws.

— Demand that agriculture be represented on land use planning commissions.

— Request that rural environmental conservation program funds be made available for cost sharing on livestock pollution control structures.

— Request the Environmental Protection Administration consult with livestock feeders before issuing regulations governing pollution control structures.

— Support the efforts of the Nebraska Beef Industry Council beef promotion program.

— Support the concept of a national checkoff program to collect funds for the promotion of meat, provided it is operated with a minimum of government control.

— Request that the Nebraska Educational Television network carry agricultural informational programs from the Institute of Agriculture on a regular basis.

— Support the continuation of special livestock weather reports.

— Support a state control vaccination program for brucellosis.

— Oppose the use of imported or synthetic meats in school lunch programs.

— Ask that industries involved in all phases of beef production join in the support of beef promotion programs.

Oak's Christmas Gift Early, Or Is It Late?

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Oak — Lugging a 133-ton steel bridge in his pack, Santa is arriving three weeks early for this Nuckolls County village.

Or is the old boy five years late?

Not since spring of 1969, when the Little Blue railroad bridge here was washed out by flooding has a train crossed the river. For three and a half years there was limited service up to the washout, but in December, 1972, Chicago and North Western abandoned the entire branch line, which served 13 towns between Seward and Superior.

The "new bridge," actually a used 100-ft. structure moved from Mapleton, Iowa, is an acquisition of the Great Plains Railway. That successor private line has been operating south of the bridge — actually 12 miles between Nora and Superior — since last June.

"Hopefully by the end of the year we will be operating the entire 85-mile length of the line," said Ira Schreiber of Lincoln, vice president.

By coincidence, Great Plains this week is resuming service to towns north of the bridge with two recently acquired locomotives. Officials anticipate it will require three weeks to install the bridge, which was disassembled before shipping.

The used bridge had been on another CNW branch line which also was abandoned by the company. The replacement project will total about $110,000.

Santa and some Union Pacific helpers are having a whole bagful of problems, incidentally, in getting the huge package actually on site. Upon arrival in Davenport Tuesday, it was discovered that the bridge "had been shipped backwards."

Schreiber explained that steel bridges are built with one end fixed and one "rolling" so as to permit expansion and contraction.

Shipped on three rail cars, the bridge sections had to be returned to Hastings so the cars could be reversed. They will now properly comply with engineering plans once the consignment reaches Oak.

However, that may well take the rest of this week. UP agent R. J. Ellis of Carleton explained that the cars were turned at Hastings but it was then discovered that nobody had officially weighed the massive bridge.

The three cars were thus deployed to special scales at Marysville, Kan.

Packer Suggests Killing Of Cows For Stockpiling

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Norfolk — A proposal to use federal funds to pay for the slaughter of at least two million cows, process them into canned meat for use in food programs or as a stockpile of beef in the event of shortages drew mixed reactions from livestock feeders attending the annual convention of the Nebraska Livestock Feeders Association.

Paul Engler, a vice president of Iowa Beef Packers of Dakota City, made the suggestion in an address before the convention Wednesday.

Engler said his proposal was strictly a personal idea he wanted to try on the feeders association for their reactions.

Engler would have all packing plants concentrate on killing beef cows for a two-week period which he indicated would allow for the processing of approximately two million cows.

The meet would be processed and perhaps then frozen for long term storage, he said.

Have To Do Something

Melvin Kuska, feeder from Fairmont, expressed interest in the idea but said, "I would hate to see beef stockpiled like grain was several years ago. It could be held over the heads of the industry as a price depressing factor. One thing is certain, however. We simply have to do something about those old cows which need to be removed from the nation's cattle herd."

The association took no direct public action on the proposal, but did suggest that meat be included in programs to feed the hungry at home and abroad.

The cost of such a program would probably exceed $200 million without paying any more than minimal prices for the old cows, according to farmers attending the meeting.

Officers Elected

Herb Albers Jr. of Wisner was elected president of the feeders association. William Krejci of Fairmont, was named first vice president; Rowland McClymont of Holdrege, second vice president; and Paul Johnson of Schuyler, secretary-treasurer.

Larry Schramm of Papillion was named the organization's representative on the Beef Industry Foundation with Jim Beller of Lindsay as an alternate.

Representing Nebraska in the National Livestock Feeders Association will be Woodrow Collins of Meadow Grove; Albers, McClymont, Krecji and Wayne Hendrickson of Kearney.

Special tribute was paid to Virgil Mulligan of the U.S. Department of Agriculture news service for his work in improving livestock market reports.

The organization voted to hold its 1975 convention at York.

The feeders passed 29 resolutions which they made public and apparently discussed a dozen or so additional instructions to their board of directors at a meeting closed to the press.

The group resolved to:

— Support for President Ford's action against Canadian beef exports to the U.S.

— Oppose restrictions on the export of agricultural commodities.

— Request that subsidization of exports of animal feeds, agricultural chemicals and fertilizer not be made at credit terms more favorable to foreign buyers than those available to domestic users.

— Request tighter enforcement of free market laws.

— Request packers to improve their efficiency and cut costs of processing red meats.

— Request increased student instruction in the field of merchandising and marketing of agricultural products at the Institute of Agriculture, University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

— Request that packers stop using the yellow sheet day-of-kill basis when buying cattle for future delivery.

— Call for the establishment of scales equipped with printing devices on monorail scales used for purchasing livestock on a dressed weight basis from farmers.

— Call for research and development of a mechanical method for grading beef carcasses.

— Call for the appointment of knowledgeable persons to the newly created Commodity Exchange Commission for the purpose of enforcing laws to curtail instability in the trading of live cattle and hog futures.

— Call for a limit of one redelivery per lot of cattle in futures trading, monthly contracts to enable delivery of cattle each month of the year, four delivery days per week and a daily limit of $1 per hundredweight in price changes on livestock futures contract.

— Request a new tax law to discourage tax shelter investment in livestock production.

— Ask for legislation to broaden the tax base in the state for the purpose of education.

— Request state tax officials use a depreciation tax schedule similar to the one used by the U.S. Internal Revenue Service for use in taxing farm machinery.

— Request tighter laws governing the exercise of imminent domain.

— Oppose any increase in interest rates under state usury laws.

— Demand that agriculture be represented on land use planning commissions.

— Request that rural environmental conservation program funds be made available for cost sharing on livestock pollution control structures.

— Request the Environmental Protection Administration consult with livestock feeders before issuing regulations governing pollution control structures.

— Support the efforts of the Nebraska Beef Industry Council beef promotion program.

— Support the concept of a national checkoff program to collect funds for the promotion of meat, provided it is operated with a minimum of government control.

— Request that the Nebraska Educational Television network carry agricultural informational programs from the Institute of Agriculture on a regular basis.

— Support the continuation of special livestock weather reports.

— Support a state control vaccination program for brucellosis.

— Oppose the use of imported or synthetic meats in school lunch programs.

— Ask that industries involved in all phases of beef production join in the support of beef promotion programs.

Crop Yields Top 2 Drought Years

Nebraska's crop yields were relatively good in 1974 compared with the drought years of 1936 and 1956, according to Dr. D. G. Hanway, chairman of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Department of Agronomy.

Precipitation for the cropping season from Oct. 1, 1973, to Sept. 31, 1974, averaged 18.58 inches, 15.40 inches for the same period in 1956, and 16.50 inches in 1936.

Hanway said he used the cropping year for comparison because the moisture that falls during that period determines how much is available to the corn crop.

Annual precipitation in Nebraska normally averages 22.33 inches, statewide.

Yields Higher

In spite of the drought and the extreme heat in July, corn, grain sorghum, and alfalfa yields in 1974 were considerably higher than in either 1936 or 1956, he said.

Improvements in varieties and technology can be traced by comparing yields in the drought years, he said.

Per acre yields in 1936 were: corn, 3.2 bushels; grain sorghum, 6.5 bushels; and alfalfa, 1.1 tons per acre.

In 1956 they were, respectively, 22 bushels, 14 bushels, and 1.5 tons.

The figures for 1974 are: corn, 26 bushels on dryland, 101 irrigated, for an overall average of 71 bushels per acre; grain sorghum, 35 bushels, and alfalfa, 2.3 tons.

Figures Separated

The 1936 and 1956 averages for corn include that which was raised under irrigation, while the figures for 1974 separate irrigated from dryland corn for the first time, Hanway pointed out.

Soil moisture supplies across Nebraska in the spring of 1974 were excellent, Hanway pointed out. Heavy rains in September 1973 built up a moisture reserve in the root zone that was a very significant factor in maintaining yields in 1974, he said.

The 101-bushel average for irrigated corn is significant to the Nebraska economy because Nebraska now has about five million irrigated acres, he said. Irrigated acreage has nearly doubled in the past 10 years, he said.

Beans Relatively New

Soybean yields, 24 bushels per acre this year, cannot be compared with 1936 because soybeans are relatively new to Nebraska. The average in 1956 was 11.5 bushels per acre.

Nor can wheat yields be compared, because the 1974 crop had ample moisture up to harvest, except in western Nebraska, where there was rain just in time to give a good crop, Hanway said.

Improvements in yields since the great drought of the "dirty thirties" have been steady because increased irrigation and constantly improved varieties, pest and disease control, fertility practices, tillage practices, and irrigation practices, he said.

Much of this improvement can be attributed directly to research and Extension by scientists of the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, he said.

NU Wins Judging

Chicago — A University of Nebraska team broke down the dynasty of Texas A&M University here during a meats judging contest held in conjunction with the Chicago International Livestock Exposition.

The NU team placed first in the contest and had the top two individuals; Texas A&M placed second. Teams from A&M have won nearly every meat judging contest they've entered the past three years.

NU team member Dick Wilson of Kearney was high individual in the contest, a spot he has become accustomed to after winning the Eastern National Contest in Virginia and the Southwestern Intercollegiate Contest in Texas.

Second high individual was Dave Lamb of Anselmo. Other team members were Peg Karlberg of Sumner; John Nelson of Herman; Gary Maricle, Albion; and Dennis Farrell, Gibbon. Team coach is Jim Wise, NU animal science instructor.

Other purple ribbon winners are:

DeWitt Team Wins Area Crop Judging

The Tri-County FFA Chapter from DeWitt took top honors among 25 teams entered in an area crops judging contest held as part of the Nebraska Junior Grain Show here Wednesday.

Team member Mark Freese, Ron Hasley and Kevin Kimmerling compiled a score of 1,646, far ahead of the second place Waverly FFA #1 team with 1,572. Waverly also placed fourth, with Wilber filling the third place slot. Fifth place in team competition went to East Butler FFA.

Waverly FFA member Marlan Johnson clung to first position in individual competition with a 573-point score, one higher than second high individual Ron Hasley of Tri-County. There were 86 individuals in the contest.

Other individual winners were: third, Mark Freese, Tri-County FFA; fourth, Dan Buresh, East Butler FFA; fifth, Dan Karnish, Omaha South FFA; sixth, Dave Swanson, Waverly FFA; seventh, Les Kotera, East Butler; and eighth, Curt Meyer, Wilber FFA.

Fire Destroys Grocery Store

Sargent (AP) — A downtown Sargent building housing a grocery store was destroyed in a fire Wednesday.

However, firemen said, cement-block walls helped confine the blaze to one building.

There were no injuries.

The fire apparently started in the back of the building, which was used for storage.

Fire units from Broken Bow, Burwell, Taylor and Sargent responded to the call.

Lineman Loses Arms; Condition Is Still 'Serious'

A veteran lineman with the York County Rural Public Power District, Victor E. Crane, 33, remained in "serious" condition Wednesday in a Lincoln hospital after losing both his arms above the elbow in a power line accident Monday.

According to Roy Speece of York, manager of the power district, Crane came into contact with a 7,200-volt line while working in rural Fillmore County, about 1½ miles south of Highway 41 between Strang and Shickley.

A lineman for about 10 years, Crane was reportedly working on a pole, hanging a meter loop for an irrigation booster pump, Speece said. Working on an adjacent pole were Harold Pimneo and Billy Downer, both also of York.

Crane was brought to St. Elizabeth Community Health Center for treatment.

Per acre yields in 1936 were: corn, 3.2 bushels; grain sorghum, 6.5 bushels; and alfalfa, 1.1 tons per acre.

In 1956 they were, respectively, 22 bushels, 14 bushels, and 1.5 tons.

The figures for 1974 are: corn, 26 bushels on dryland, 101 irrigated, for an overall average of 71 bushels per acre; grain sorghum, 35 bushels, and alfalfa, 2.3 tons.

Figures Separated

The 1936 and 1956 averages for corn include that which was raised under irrigation, while the figures for 1974 separate irrigated from dryland corn for the first time, Hanway pointed out.

Soil moisture supplies across Nebraska in the spring of 1974 were excellent, Hanway pointed out. Heavy rains in September 1973 built up a moisture reserve in the root zone that was a very significant factor in maintaining yields in 1974, he said.

The 101-bushel average for irrigated corn is significant to the Nebraska economy because Nebraska now has about five million irrigated acres, he said. Irrigated acreage has nearly doubled in the past 10 years, he said.

Beans Relatively New

Soybean yields, 24 bushels per acre this year, cannot be compared with 1936 because soybeans are relatively new to Nebraska. The average in 1956 was 11.5 bushels per acre.

Nor can wheat yields be compared, because the 1974 crop had ample moisture up to harvest, except in western Nebraska, where there was rain just in time to give a good crop, Hanway said.

Improvements in yields since the great drought of the "dirty thirties" have been steady because increased irrigation and constantly improved varieties, pest and disease control, fertility practices, tillage practices, and irrigation practices, he said.

Much of this improvement can be attributed directly to research and Extension by scientists of the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, he said.

NU Wins Judging

Chicago — A University of Nebraska team broke down the dynasty of Texas A&M University here during a meats judging contest held in conjunction with the Chicago International Livestock Exposition.

The NU team placed first in the contest and had the top two individuals; Texas A&M placed second. Teams from A&M have won nearly every meat judging contest they've entered the past three years.

NU team member Dick Wilson of Kearney was high individual in the contest, a spot he has become accustomed to after winning the Eastern National Contest in Virginia and the Southwestern Intercollegiate Contest in Texas.

Second high individual was Dave Lamb of Anselmo. Other team members were Peg Karlberg of Sumner; John Nelson of Herman; Gary Maricle, Albion; and Dennis Farrell, Gibbon. Team coach is Jim Wise, NU animal science instructor.

DeWitt Team Wins Area Crop Judging

The Tri-County FFA Chapter from DeWitt took top honors among 25 teams entered in an area crops judging contest held as part of the Nebraska Junior Grain Show here Wednesday.

Team member Mark Freese, Ron Hasley and Kevin Kimmerling compiled a score of 1,646, far ahead of the second place Waverly FFA #1 team with 1,572. Waverly also placed fourth, with Wilber filling the third place slot. Fifth place in team competition went to East Butler FFA.

Waverly FFA member Marlan Johnson clung to first position in individual competition with a 573-point score, one higher than second high individual Ron Hasley of Tri-County. There were 86 individuals in the contest.

Other individual winners were: third, Mark Freese, Tri-County FFA; fourth, Dan Buresh, East Butler FFA; fifth, Dan Karnish, Omaha South FFA; sixth, Dave Swanson, Waverly FFA; seventh, Les Kotera, East Butler; and eighth, Curt Meyer, Wilber FFA.

Fire Destroys Grocery Store

Sargent (AP) — A downtown Sargent building housing a grocery store was destroyed in a fire Wednesday.

However, firemen said, coment-block walls helped confine the blaze to one building.

There were no injuries.

The fire apparently started in the back of the building, which was used for storage.

Fire units from Broken Bow, Burwell, Taylor and Sargent responded to the call.

Lineman Loses Arms; Condition Is Still 'Serious'

A veteran lineman with the York County Rural Public Power District, Victor E. Crane, 33, remained in "serious" condition Wednesday in a Lincoln hospital after losing both his arms above the elbow in a power line accident Monday.

According to Roy Speece of York, manager of the power district, Crane came into contact with a 7,200-volt line while working in rural Fillmore County, about 1½ miles south of Highway 41 between Strang and Shickley.

A lineman for about 10 years, Crane was reportedly working on a pole, hanging a meter loop for an irrigation booster pump, Speece said. Working on an adjacent pole were Harold Pinneo and Billy Downer, both also of York.

Crane was brought to St. Elizabeth Community Health Center for treatment.

Crenshaw Earns All-American Status From UPI

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ohio State, although failing to fulfill Coach Woody Hayes' dream of a perfect season, showed it still has a firm grip on the individual talent pool by placing five players Wednesday on the 1974 United Press International All-America college football team.

The second-ranked Buckeyes, compiling a 10-1 regular season record and a trip to the Rose Bowl for the third straight year, were represented on the All-America first team by Heisman Trophy winning running back Archie Griffin, offensive tackle Kurt Schumacher, center Steve Myers, defensive end Van DeCree and defensive back Neal Colzie.

Griffin, a junior who has established an NCAA record for consistency by gaining over 100 yards in 22 straight games, and DeCree, a senior who played a prominent role in the Buckeyes' No. 2 national ranking in defense, are repeaters from last year's squad.

Griffin was the leading vote-getter in balloting of sports writers and sportscasters from across the nation.

Joining Griffin in the All-America backfield are quarterback Steve Bartkowski of California and running backs Anthony Davis of Southern California and Joe Washington of Oklahoma. Washington, the leading rusher in the Big Eight, is only a junior and was one of four players from Oklahoma named to the squad.

Other Sooner players to gain first team honors were guard John Roush, linebacker Rod Shoate and defensive back Randy Hughes.

In all, 13 schools were represented on the team with Notre Dame and Southern California the only other teams placing as many as two players.

Notre Dame, which hasn't missed landing at least one player on the first team since 1962, placed wide receiver Pete Demmerle and guard Gerry DiNardo, whose older brother, Larry, once achieved first team honors. Southern Cal had linebacker Richard Wood in addition to Davis. Wood is a repeater from last year's team.

Other schools placing a player were top-ranked Alabama, Clemson, Nebraska, Stanford, Penn State, Maryland, Miami (Fla.) and Michigan.

Alahama, which also posted a perfect 11-0 record, named linebacker Woodrow Lowe, Clemson tabbed junior tight end Bennie Cunningham, Nebraska was represented by offensive tackle Marvin Crenshaw, Stanford placed defensive end Pat Donovan, Penn State named defensive tackle Mike Hartenstine, Maryland had Outland Trophy winner Randy White, Miami tabbed middle guard Rubin Carter and Michigan placed defensive back Dave Brown. Brown also is a repeater from last year's team.

Alabama was the only team to have more than one representaive on the second unit. The Crimson Tide named defensive back Mike Washington, center Sylvester Croom and defensive end Leroy Cook to the second team.

Others named to the second team offensive squad were wide receiver Pat McInally of Harvard, tight end Dan Natale of Penn State, tackles Dennis Harrah of Miami (Fla.) and Bob Simmons of Texas, guards Ken Huff of North Carolina and Steve Ostermann of Washington State, quarterback Steve Joachim of Temple and running backs Billy Marek of Wisconsin, Louis Giammona of Utah State and Tony Dorsett of Pittsburgh.

Additional second team defensive selections were end Greg Murphy of Penn State, tackle Pete Cusick of Ohio State and Leroy Selmon of Oklahoma, middle guard Gary Burley of Pittsburgh, linebackers Bob Breunig of Arizona State, Steve Strinko of Michigan and Ed Siminoni of Texas A&M and deep backs John Provost of Holy Cross and Barry Hill of Iowa State.

This year's first team backfield is one of the more productive in recent years. Griffin, Davis and Washington accounted for 4,295 yards rushing between them and an average of 5.9 yards per carry. The trio also scored 44 touchdowns and 272 points.

Bartkowski, the quarterback, was the nation's leading passer and second-leading total offense leader. He averaged 16.5 completions a game and threw for 2,580 yards and 12 touchdowns.

Demmerle and Cunningham, the two ends on the first team, also distinguished themselves with impressive receiving statistics. Demmerle caught 43 passes for 667 yards and six touchdowns while Cunningham, used mostly as a blocker, caught 24 passes for 391 yards and seven TD's.

Indiana Tops Kansas In Overtime, 74-70

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — John Laskowski and Scott May shot third-ranked Indiana to a 74-70 victory over sixth-ranked Kansas in a tense overtime basketball struggle Wednesday night.

After Kansas led five times in the extra period, Laskowski put the hot shot Hoosiers ahead for good at 71-70 with 36 seconds showing on the clock. After that, Steve Green hit an Indiana field goal with one second left, was fouled on the shot and connected on the free throw.

Until Laskowski came up with his basket, May had pulled the Hoosiers from behind four times as the lead shifted back and forth. He made nine points during the overtime action.

Rick Suttle sent Kansas out front 62-60 soon after the extra period began, but May, fouled by Norm Cook, when he dropped in a two-pointer, cashed in at the free-throw line to boost Indiana into a 63-62 lead.

A minute later, Donnie Von Moore put Kansas ahead again with a seven-footer. May came right back and countered with a five-foot shot that gave the Hoosiers the advantage. Tommie Smith's layup with 2:42 left gave Kansas the lead for the third time before May dumped in a 17-foot shot 21 seconds later.

Cook, who forced the game into overtime on a follow shot with 15 seconds left in regulation, hit a layup to lift Kansas into the lead with 2:12 left. May's next shot shortly thereafter was a 12-foot strike.

Von Moore dropped in a 15-footer with 57 seconds to go that put Kansas ahead for the last time. Laskowski got into the act 21 seconds later.

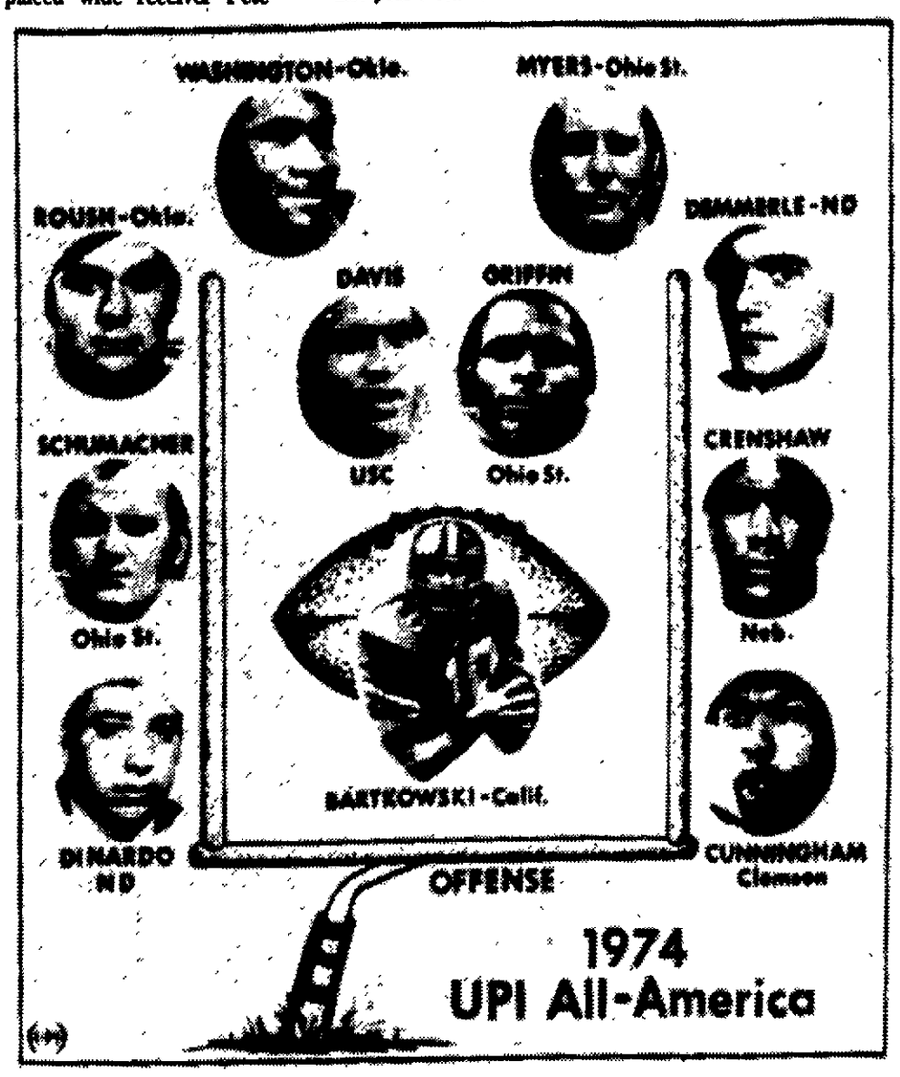

May topped Indiana with 29 points and Green had 19. Von Moore was high for Kansas with 17.

Indiana is 2-0 and Kansas 2-1.

Kiffin, Melton Eyed

The annual end-of-season chess game that college athletic directors and football coaches play is underway again.

As usual, it involves assistant coaches from a proven winning program like Nebraska — notably defensive coordinator Monte Kiffin and wingback-tight end mentor John Melton.

An informed source on the Cornhusker campus says Kansas athletic director Clyde Walker has contacted NU coach Tom Osborne for permission to talk to Kiffin about the Jayhawk job following the resignation of Don Fambrough.

Kiffin is also still high on the list of two other major football powers — at South Carolina where the Gamecocks seek a replacement for the resigned Paul Dietzel and at the University of Washington where longtime coach Jim Owens has stepped down.

Melton, who came to Nebraska with Bob Devaney from Wyoming — his alma mater — is being eyed by that school to replace the fired Fritz Shurmur.

Wyoming athletic director George McCarty says he is still in the search stage and hasn't invited anyone in for an interview yet.

"We've had a great number of phone calls from boosters of our program urging us to consider Melton and Jimmy Walden, who played for us and was a coach at Nebraska for awhile," McCarty reveals.

McCarty says both Melton and Walden are among the 50 written applications he has received. "In addition, I've had another 60 coaches inquire by phone."

None of the Nebraska coaches were available for comment Wednesday morning. They were scattered throughout the country on recruiting trips.

With Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer in the news as a possible candidate for the Atlanta Falcon job in the pros and the fact that OU defensive coordinator Larry Lacewell is high on the list at Kansas State to replace Vince Gibson, the 'ifs' begin to involve even more assistants throughout the Big Eight — most notably, Warren Powers, the highly regarded defensive backfield coach at Nebraska.

It's that time of year. The many possibilities give rabid Big Red fans something to talk about between now and Sugar Bowl time.

Bottorff Picked Top Executive

Former Lincolnite Roger Bottorff has been named the International League's Executive of the Year at the winter baseball meetings in New Orleans, La.

Bottorff, who went to Lincoln High, the University of Nebraska and was general manager of the old Lincoln Chief's baseball club, is the current general manager of the Richmond Braves.

Bottorff was chosen in a poll of International League general managers taken by the National Association of Baseball Leagues. The award is based on all-round activity regarding the franchise, such as preseason sales and promotions.

With the Richmond club having finished in the second division six straight times, Bottorff faced a bleak outlook last winter, but the Braves drew over 100,000 fans which was a substantial gain over the previous season.

General Tobacco Snaps Win String

The General Tobacco team of the Salvation Army's Little Fry League, defeated Wentz Plumbing, 33-31, Wednesday night, snapping a 2½ year winning streak by Wentz Plumbing of 44 straight games.

In the other games, Havelock Lions topped the Rotary Club, 33-17, and Commonwealth Electric scored a 26-12 victory over Whitehead 66.

AAA Softball Sets Officers

The Lincoln AAA Fast Pitch Softball Association has elected officers for the 1975 season.

Ken Groenbach was chosen president, Bob White vice-president and Jim Duff secretary-treasurer for the league.

Carter, Cunningham, Mix Pace 76ers Past Kings

From News Wires

Fred Carter, Bill Cunningham and Steve Mix combined for 72 points Wednesday night at the Philadelphia 76ers rallied for a 109-105 victory over the Kansas City-Omaha Kings in a National Basketball Association game at Philadelphia.

Other NBA action found Washington trouncing Portland, 114-87; Boston outlasting Los Angeles, 101-90 and Detroit downing Houston, 86-69 in a defensive struggle.

Mix scored 20 of his 23 points in the second half as Philadelphia ended a four-game losing streak.

Kansas City led 79-73 entering the fourth quarter and was on top by 8 points at 85-77 with 10:07 left. Phiadelphia moved in front 88-87 with 7:41 remaining.

A field goal by LeRoy Ellis with 5:51 left gave Philadelphia a 92-90 lead it never surrendered. The Sixers led by seven points at 103-96.

Carter had 25 points to lead the Sixers and Cunningham finished with 24.

In Boston, Dave Cowens scored 32 points, eight of them in the final period for the Celtics.

The Boston center and Los Angeles' Kermit Washington traded punches and were ejected from the game with 49 seconds remaining.

Cowens, making his second start since returning from a broken foot, came off the bench with Los Angeles leading 71-70 and steered the Celtics to the win.

His rebound made it 74-71, his outside shot made it 80-75, his driving layin boosted the lead to 84-79, and another Cowens layup sealed the decision at 88-81.

Lucius Allen had 17 points for the Lakers.

Elvin Hayes, Phil Chenier and Kevin Porter pumped in 23 points each to pace the Washington Bullets' fourth straight victory.

The victory was Washington's 17th in 23 games, giving the Bullets the best record in the National Basketball Association.

Wes Unseld grabbed 21 rebounds for Washington and Hayes pulled down 14.

Sidney Wicks scored 23 points for Portland, now 12-12 after two losses in a row. Bill Walton again did not play because of a bone spur on his left foot.

Bob Lanier scored 10 points as the Detroit Pistons jumped to a 28-16 first-quarter lead and coasted to their victory.

Lanier topped all scorers with 24 points, while teammates Dave Bing and Curtis Rowe added 18 and 14.

Zaid Abdul-Aziz led Houston with 13 points, and Calvin Murphy added 11.

Houston's point total was the lowest scored in an NBA game this year and set a defensive record for the Pistons. Detroit's previous low was 78 points given up Jan. 4, 1958, to Philadelphia.

It was the sixth consecutive loss for the Rockets and their seventh in the last eight games.

Buffs Top St. Louis

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Jay Sferra hit two free throws with 14 seconds left in the game to give Colorado an 85-81 nonconference basketball victory over St. Louis Wednesday night.

Only seven seconds earlier Bill Morris of the Billikens brought his team within two points at 83-81 with a layup.

St. Louis was ahead at halftime, 39-38, but Colorado came back and moved to a 77-69 lead on a tip-in by Larry Vaculik with five minutes remaining.

St. Louis then scored six straight points before Sferra hit a layup to stretch the CU edge to four points.

Orioles Trade Dave McNally

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The Baltimore Orioles, moving boldly and swiftly to reestablish themselves as the class of the American League East, acquired their second "big stick" in 24 hours Wednesday by sending former 20-game winner Dave McNally to the Montreal Expos for switch-hitting Ken Singleton in a five-player swap.

Meanwhile, on another front, the arrival of Oakland owner Charles O. Finley at the winter baseball meetings touched off further reports the world champion A's might be sold to a New Orleans group.

Finley swept into town late Tuesday night and immediately huddled with his front office chief John Claiborne and A's manager Alvin Dark.

The Orioles, obviously concerned over their closest rival New York Yankees' acquisition of Bobby Bonds, added the 6-4, 27-year-old Singleton, a 23-homer, 108 rbi man two years ago, to their booty here that already included slugger Lee May from Houston a day earlier.

"We wanted Bonds and the fact that we didn't get him made us realize we had to get someone else awfully quick," revealed Jim Russo, Orioles' assistant general manager.

"I don't have to tell you it was a great wrenching to trade McNally who has meant so much to the success of the Orioles," said Baltimore general manager Frank Cashen. "But we needed more power and Singleton in right field can provide that."

According to the terms of Wednesday's deal, the Expos, who do not have an experienced lefthanded pitcher on their roster get McNally, a 20-game winner in four of the last seven seasons, outfielder Rich Coggins and minor league pitcher Bill Kirkpatrick. The Orioles, in addition to Singleton, obtained right handed fast-baller Mike Torrez, who will replace the 28-year-old McNally in their starting rotation.

The addition of Singleton, who tailed off in production this year to .276 with nine homers and 74 rbis, gives the Orioles a nice blend of power and speed in their outfield which already includes Paul Blair and Don Taylor. Torrez, 15-8, was the co-leader in victories on the Montreal staff this year.

For the Expos, desperate for lefthanded pitching, the inclusion of McNally, 10-10 in 1974, was a must. Coggins, who slumped to .253 after a .310 rookie campaign in 1973, will add a stolen base threat to the Montreal lineup.

"It's no big secret that lefthanded pitching is our specific need at these meetings," confirmed Expo general manager Jim Fanning. "McNally (the third $100,000 ball player to be dealt at the meetings) was the key for us, but Coggins will also be an every day player in right field."

As for the Finley-New Orleans situation, among those scheduled to meet with the controversial A's owner was Frederick Tallis, former general manager of the Kansas City Royals, who now represents the Louisiana Sports Commission that is hoping to land a franchise—existing or expansion—for the multi-million dollar Superdome.

Big Ten Alters Policy For Selecting Bowl Team

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Big Ten Wednesday announced revision of its policies to select a Rose Bowl team to take the determination away from a vote by athletic directors

Under the new format, the conference champion will compete every year, or if there is a tie, the winner of the game between the tied teams will go to the bowl.

If there is a tie between two teams which did not play, the team with the best winning percentage for the season would go. If there is still a tie, the team which most recently played in the bowl would be eliminated.

The conference action took away the right of selection by a vote of athletic directors for the first time since the Big Ten began sending a team to the Rose Bowl in 1946. In every previous year, the directors voted to select the team.

The conference discussed informally a proposal to make teams other than the conference champion eligible for other bowl games, but took no action.

However, there was an indication of the sentiment of the conference when Commissioner Wayne Duke said that only two of the teams named for bowls this year have records better than or equal to Michigan with a 10-1 record.

He said Michigan State, at 7-3-1, has a better record than seven bowl teams, Wisconsin, with a 7-4 record, has a better record than five bowl teams, and Illinois, 6-4-1, has a better record than four bowl teams.

Under the new Rose Bowl selection format, Ohio State still would have been named for the bowl this year as the winner of its game with Michigan. The two teams tied for the championship but the Buckeyes won a 12-10 decision in their meeting.

However, last year when Ohio State was voted into the bowl by the athletic directors, Michigan would have received the bowl nod under the newly adopted format as co-champoion of the conference.

Ohio State, after its tie game with Michigan, would have been eliminated because of more recent participation in the bowl.

The conference also approved revised plans for selection of teams to the NCAA basketball tournament to eliminate a playoff if the tournament will take two Big Ten teams.

Should only one team be eligible for the tournament, there would be a playoff in case of a co-championship. Should there be two teams in the tournament, there would be no playoff and the assignment of sites for games would be determined by a formula involving season records.

The conference still could send teams to the National Invitational Tournament and will sent a team to the Commissioners' Tournament.

The conference also approved extenstion of its hardship rule giving eligibility to injured athletes, changes in the date of letters of intent for grants in aid, and a tougher normalprogress rule to assure graduation of more athletes.

Last Of A Series

Even before Colorado super-star David Logan went out with a knee injury in the season's next-to-last football game, the Buffaloes were headed for a rebuilding season in basketball.

Now, with Logan gone, veteran coach Sox Walseth has players returning who scored only an average of 14.2 points a game.

"The future looks good, but for this particular season I just don't know," Walseth said. "If all depends on how fast we develop. We'll have a young team, basically, but I think we're going to be a competitive team. I'm certain we have enough good athletes."

Walseth, the dean of Big Eight coaches starting his 19th year at Colorado, says he's optimistic that the Buffaloes will be "pretty tough" before the season ends.

When Walseth talks about the future, he's thinking of the ten freshmen and sophomores he's blending in with the scattering of experienced hands.

Two of the sophomores — 6-8 Indiana transfer Mike Miller and Mueller — definitely will be starters at the outset of the year along with senior Ron Wrigley, who is 6-7 and became a full-time starter late last season after graduated Scott Wedman suffered a severe ankle injury.

Another sophomore, 5-8 Jay Sferra, who originally was a baseball scholarship player, is battling redshirt junior Rick Arguello (5-10) for the back court spot opposite the Buffaloes' most experienced player, 6-4 Tony Lawrence.

Lawrence, a senior who averaged 6.8 points last year as a junior college transfer, started most of the pre-season games a year ago.

Walseth has three big men who figure in Colorado's future hopes. They're Freshmen Larry Vaculik (6-8) of Omaha, Tome Wente (6-8) and Kurt Schoenhoff (6-7).

"Those three big kids definitely will be factors, but I don't know if it will be this year," Walseth said. Here's what he says about them:

Vaculik: "Larry's the biggest of the three freshmen and the strongest on the boards. He has a real good shooting touch."

Wente: "Tom's the most active of the three. He moves around very well and has excellent quickness."

Schoenhoff: "Kurt's the smallest, but he's as effective right around the basket as any of the others. He has a good shooting touch and always seems to be in the right place."

Colorado's other first-year recruits are 6-4 guards Alvin Berry and Dave Bolen, players Walseth calls "good prospects" but not as far along as the big men because they're being asked to switch from forward, where they played in high school, to guard.

Key to Colorado's early success will be Lawrence, a rangy 6-4, 190-pounder at guard, and Wrigley has to provide senior leadership.

Crenshaw Earns All-American Status From UPI

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ohio State, although failing to fulfill Coach Woody Hayes' dream of a perfect season, showed it still has a firm grip on the individual talent pool by placing five players Wednesday on the 1974 United Press International All-America college football team.

The second-ranked Buckeyes, compiling a 10-1 regular season record and a trip to the Rose Bowl for the third straight year, were represented on the All-America first team by Heisman Trophy winning running back Archie Griffin, offensive tackle Kurt Schumacher, center Steve Myers, defensive end Van DeCree and defensive back Neal Colzie.

Griffin, a junior who has established an NCAA record for consistency by gaining over 100 yards in 22 straight games, and DeCree, a senior who played a prominent role in the Buckeyes' No. 2 national ranking in defense, are repeaters from last year's squad.

Griffin was the leading vote-getter in balloting of sports writers and sportscasters from across the nation.

Joining Griffin in the All-America backfield are quarterback Steve Bartkowski of California and running backs Anthony Davis of Southern California and Joe Washington of Oklahoma. Washington, the leading rusher in the Big Eight, is only a junior and was one of four players from Oklahoma named to the squad.

Other Sooner players to gain first team honors were guard John Roush, linebacker Rod Shoate and defensive back Randy Hughes.

In all, 13 schools were represented on the team with Notre Dame and Southern California the only other teams placing as many as two players.

Notre Dame, which hasn't missed landing at least one player on the first team since 1962, placed wide receiver Pete Demmerle and guard Gerry DiNardo, whose older brother, Larry, once achieved first team honors. Southern Cal had linebacker Richard Wood in addition to Davis. Wood is a repeater from last year's team.

Other schools placing a player were top-ranked Alabama, Clemson, Nebraska, Stanford, Penn State, Maryland, Miami (Fla.) and Michigan.

Alabama, which also posted a perfect 11-0 record, named linebacker Woodrow Lowe, Clemson tabbed junior tight end Bennie Cunningham, Nebraska was represented by offensive tackle Marvin Crenshaw, Stanford placed defensive end Pat Donovan, Penn State named defensive tackle Mike Hartenstine, Maryland had Outland Trophy winner Randy White, Miami tabbed middle guard Rubin Carter and Michigan placed defensive back Dave Brown. Brown also is a repeater from last year's team.

Alabama was the only team to have more than one representaive on the second unit. The Crimson Tide named defensive back Mike Washington, center Sylvester Croom and defensive end Leroy Cook to the second team.

Others named to the second team offensive squad were wide receiver Pat McInally of Harvard, tight end Dan Natale of Penn State, tackles Dennis Harrah of Miami (Fla.) and Bob Simmons of Texas, guards Ken Huff of North Carolina and Steve Ostermann of Washington State, quarterback Steve Joachim of Temple and running backs Billy Marek of Wisconsin, Louis Giammona of Utah State and Tony Dorsett of Pittsburgh.

Additional second team defensive selections were end Greg Murphy of Penn State, tackle Pete Cusick of Ohio State and Leroy Selmon of Oklahoma, middle guard Gary Burley of Pittsburgh, linebackers Bob Breunig of Arizona State, Steve Strinko of Michigan and Ed Siminoni of Texas A&M and deep backs John Provost of Holy Cross and Barry Hill of Iowa State.

This year's first team backfield is one of the more productive in recent years. Griffin, Davis and Washington accounted for 4,295 yards rushing between them and an average of 5.9 yards per carry. The trio also scored 44 touchdowns and 272 points.

Bartkowski, the quarterback, was the nation's leading passer and second-leading total offense leader. He averaged 16.5 completions a game and threw for 2,580 yards and 12 touchdowns.

Demmerle and Cunningham, the two ends on the first team, also distinguished themselves with impressive receiving statistics. Demmerle caught 43 passes for 667 yards and six touchdowns while Cunningham, used mostly as a blocker, caught 24 passes for 391 yards and seven TD's.

Indiana Tops Kansas In Overtime, 74-70

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — John Laskowski and Scott May shot third-ranked Indiana to a 74-70 victory over sixth-ranked Kansas in a tense overtime basketball struggle Wednesday night.

After Kansas led five times in the extra period, Laskowski put the hot shot Hoosiers ahead for good at 71-70 with 36 seconds showing on the clock. After that, Steve Green hit an Indiana field goal with one second left, was fouled on the shot and connected on the free throw.

Until Laskowski came up with his basket, May had pulled the Hoosiers from behind four times as the lead shifted back and forth. He made nine points during the overtime action.

Rick Suttle sent Kansas out front 62-60 soon after the extra period began, but May, fouled by Norm Cook, when he dropped in a two-pointer, cashed in at the free-throw line to boost Indiana into a 63-62 lead.

A minute later, Donnie Von Moore put Kansas ahead again with a seven-footer. May came right back and countered with a five-foot shot that gave the Hoosiers the advantage. Tommie Smith's layup with 2:42 left gave Kansas the lead for the third time before May dumped in a 17-foot shot 21 seconds later.

Cook, who forced the game into overtime on a follow shot with 15 seconds left in regulation, hit a layup to lift Kansas into the lead with 2:12 left. May's next shot shortly thereafter was a 12-foot strike.

Von Moore dropped in a 15-footer with 57 seconds to go that put Kansas ahead for the last time. Laskowski got into the act 21 seconds later.

May topped Indiana with 29 points and Green had 19. Von Moore was high for Kansas with 17.

Indiana is 2-0 and Kansas 2-1.

Kiffin, Melton Eyed

The annual end-of-season chess game that college athletic directors and football coaches play is underway again.

As usual, it involves assistant coaches from a proven winning program like Nebraska — notably defensive coordinator Monte Kiffin and wingback-tight end mentor John Melton.

An informed source on the Cornhusker campus says Kansas athletic director Clyde Walker has contacted NU coach Tom Osborne for permission to talk to Kiffin about the Jayhawk job following the resignation of Don Fambrough.

Kiffin is also still high on the list of two other major football powers — at South Carolina where the Gamecocks seek a replacement for the resigned Paul Dietzel and at the University of Washington where longtime coach Jim Owens has stepped down.

Melton, who came to Nebraska with Bob Devaney from Wyoming — his alma mater — is being eyed by that school to replace the fired Fritz Shurmur.

Wyoming athletic director George McCarty says he is still in the search stage and hasn't invited anyone in for an interview yet.

"We've had a great number of phone calls from boosters of our program urging us to consider Melton and Jimmy Walden, who played for us and was a coach at Nebraska for awhile," McCarty reveals.

McCarty says both Melton and Walden are among the 50 written applications he has received. "In addition, I've had another 60 coaches inquire by phone."

None of the Nebraska coaches were available for comment Wednesday morning. They were scattered throughout the country on recruiting trips.

With Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer in the news as a possible candidate for the Atlanta Falcon job in the pros and the fact that OU defensive coordinator Larry Lacewell is high on the list at Kansas State to replace Vince Gibson, the 'ifs' begin to involve even more assistants throughout the Big Eight — most notably, Warren Powers, the highly regarded defensive backfield coach at Nebraska.

It's that time of year. The many possibilities give rabid Big Red fans something to talk about between now and Sugar Bowl time.

Bottorff Picked Top Executive

Former Lincolnite Roger Bottorff has been named the International League's Executive of the Year at the winter baseball meetings in New Orleans, La.

Bottorff, who went to Lincoln High, the University of Nebraska and was general manager of the old Lincoln Chief's baseball club, is the current general manager of the Richmond Braves.

Bottorff was chosen in a poll of International League general managers taken by the National Association of Baseball Leagues. The award is based on all-round activity regarding the franchise, such as preseason sales and promotions.

With the Richmond club having finished in the second division six straight times, Bottorff faced a bleak outlook last winter, but the Braves drew over 100,000 fans which was a substantial gain over the previous season.

Carter, Cunningham, Mix Pace 76ers Past Kings

From News Wires

Fred Carter, Bill Cunningham and Steve Mix combined for 72 points Wednesday night at the Philadelphia 76ers rallied for a 109-105 victory over the Kansas City-Omaha Kings in a National Basketball Association game at Philadelphia.

Other NBA action found Washington trouncing Portland, 114-87; Boston outlasting Los Angeles, 101-90 and Detroit downing Houston, 86-69 in a defensive struggle.

Mix scored 20 of his 23 points in the second half as Philadelphia ended a four-game losing streak.

Kansas City led 79-73 entering the fourth quarter and was on top by 8 points at 85-77 with 10:07 left. Phiadelphia moved in front 88-87 with 7:41 remaining.

A field goal by LeRoy Ellis with 5:51 left gave Philadelphia a 92-90 lead it never surrendered. The Sixers led by seven points at 103-96.

Carter had 25 points to lead the Sixers and Cunningham finished with 24.

In Boston, Dave Cowens scored 32 points, eight of them in the final period for the Celtics.

The Boston center and Los Angeles' Kermit Washington traded punches and were ejected from the game with 49 seconds remaining.

Cowens, making his second start since returning from a broken foot, came off the bench with Los Angeles leading 71-70 and steered the Celtics to the win.

His rebound made it 74-71, his outside shot made it 80-75, his driving layin boosted the lead to 84-79, and another Cowens layup sealed the decision at 88-81.

Lucius Allen had 17 points for the Lakers.

Elvin Hayes, Phil Chenier and Kevin Porter pumped in 23 points each to pace the Washington Bullets' fourth straight victory.

The victory was Washington's 17th in 23 games, giving the Bullets the best record in the National Basketball Association.

Wes Unseld grabbed 21 rebounds for Washington and Hayes pulled down 14.

Sidney Wicks scored 23 points for Portland, now 12-12 after two losses in a row. Bill Walton again did not play because of a bone spur on his left foot.

Bob Lanier scored 10 points as the Detroit Pistons jumped to a 28-16 first-quarter lead and coasted to their victory.

Lanier topped all scorers with 24 points, while teammates Dave Bing and Curtis Rowe added 18 and 14.

Zaid Abdul-Aziz led Houston with 13 points, and Calvin Murphy added 11.

Houston's point total was the lowest scored in an NBA game this year and set a defensive record for the Pistons. Detroit's previous low was 78 points given up Jan. 4, 1958, to Philadelphia.

It was the sixth consecutive loss for the Rockets and their seventh in the last eight games.

CU Depending On Youngsters

Last Of A Series

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

Even before Colorado super-star David Logan went out with a knee injury in the season's next-to-last football game, the Buffaloes were headed for a rebuilding season in basketball.

Now, with Logan gone, veteran coach Sox Walseth has players returning who scored only an average of 14.2 points a game.

"The future looks good, but for this particular season I just don't know," Walseth said. "It all depends on how fast we develop. We'll have a young team, basically, but I think we're going to be a competitive team. I'm certain we have enough good athletes."

Walseth, the dean of Big Eight coaches starting his 19th year at Colorado, says he's optimistic that the Buffaloes will be "pretty tough" before the season ends.

Colorado got a rude introduction in its opener, losing last Saturday at California 98-78 as sophomore Gary Mueller, a 6-7 redshirt replacement for Logan, scored 19 points.

When Walseth taks about the future, he's thinking of the ten freshmen and sophomores he's blending in with the scattering of experienced hands.

Two of the sophomores — 6-8 Indiana transfer Mike Miller and Mueller — definitely will be starters at the outset of the year along with senior Ron Wrigley, who is 6-7 and became a full-time starter late last season after graduated Scott Wedman suffered a severe ankle injury.

Another sophomore, 5-8 Jay Sferra, who originally was a baseball scholarship player, is battling redshirt junior Rick Arguello (5-10) for the back court spot opposite the Buffaloes' most experienced player, 6-4 Tony Lawrence.

Lawrence, a senior who averaged 6.8 points last year as a junior college transfer, started most of the pre-season games a year ago.

Walseth has three big men who figure in Colorado's future hopes. They're Freshmen Larry Vaculik (6-8) of Omaha, Tome Wente (6-8) and Kurt Schoenhoff (6-7).

"Those three big kids definitely will be factors, but I don't know if it will be this year," Walseth said. Here's what he says about them:

Vaculik: "Larry's the biggest of the three freshmen and the strongest on the boards. He has a real good shooting touch."

Wente: "Tom's the most active of the three. He moves around very well and has excellent quickness."

Schoenhoff: "Kurt's the smallest, but he's as effective right around the basket as any of the others. He has a good shooting touch and always seems to be in the right place."

Colorado's other first-year recruits are 6-4 guards Alvin Berry and Dave Bolen, players Walseth calls "good prospects" but not as far along as the big men because they're being asked to switch from forward, where they played in high school, to guard.

Key to Colorado's early success will be Lawrence, a rangy 6-4, 190-pounder at guard, and Wrigley has to provide senior leadership.

Orioles Trade Dave McNally

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The Baltimore Orioles, moving boldly and swiftly to reestablish themselves as the class of the American League East, acquired their second "big stick" in 24 hours Wednesday by sending former 20-game winner Dave McNally to the Montreal Expos for switch-hitting Ken Singleton in a five-player swap.

Meanwhile, on another front, the arrival of Oakland owner Charles O. Finley at the winter baseball meetings touched off further reports the world champion A's might be sold to a New Orleans group.

Finley swept into town late Tuesday night and immediately huddled with his front office chief John Claiborne and A's manager Alvin Dark.

The Orioles, obviously concerned over their closest rival New York Yankees' acquisition of Bobby Bonds, added the 6-4, 27-year-old Singleton, a 23-homer, 103 rbi man two years ago, to their booty here that already included slugger Lee May from Houston a day earlier.

"We wanted Bonds and the fact that we didn't get him made us realize we had to get someone else awfully quick," revealed Jim Russo, Orioles' assistant general manager.

"I don't have to tell you it was a great wrenching to trade McNally who has meant so much to the success of the Orioles," said Baltimore general manager Frank Cashen. "But we needed more power and Singleton in right field can provide that."

According to the terms of Wednesday's deal, the Expos, who do not have an experienced lefthanded pitcher on their roster get McNally, a 20-game winner in four of the last seven seasons, outfielder Rich Coggins and minor league pitcher Bill Kirkpatrick. The Orioles, in addition to Singleton, obtained right handed fast-baller Mike Torrez, who will replace the 32-year-old McNally in their starting rotation.

The addition of Singleton, who tailed off in production this year to .276 with nine homers and 74 rbis, gives the Orioles a nice blend of power and speed in their outfield which already includes Paul Blair and Don Taylor. Torrez, 15-8, was the co-leader in victories on the Montreal staff this year.

For the Expos, desperate for lefthanded pitching, the inclusion of McNally, 16-10 in 1974, was a must. Coggins, who slumped to .243 after a .319 rookie campaign in 1973, will add a stolen base threat to the Montreal lineup.

"It's no big secret that lefthanded pitching is our specific need at these meetings," confirmed Expo general manager Jim Fanning. "McNally (the third $100,000 ball player to be dealt at the meetings) was the key for us, but Coggins will also be an every day player in right field."

As for the Finley-New Orleans situatiion, among those scheduled to meet with the controversial A's owner was Frederick Tallis, former general manager of the Kansas City Royals, who now represents the Louisiana Sports Commission that is hoping to land a franchise—existing or expansion—for the multi-million dollar Superdome.

Big Ten Alters Policy For Selecting Bowl Team

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Big Ten Wednesday announced revision of its policies to select a Rose Bowl team to take the determination away from a vote by athletic directors.

Under the new format, the conference champion will compete every year, or if there is a tie, the winner of the game between the tied teams will go to the bowl.

If there is a tie between two teams which did not play, the team with the best winning percentage for the season would go. If there is still a tie, the team which most recently played in the bowl would be eliminated.

The conference action took away the right of selection by a vote of athletic directors for the first time since the Big Ten began sending a team to the Rose Bowl in 1946. In every previous year, the directors voted to select the team.

The conference discussed informally a proposal to make teams other than the conference champion eligible for other bowl games, but took no action.

However, there was an indication of the sentiment of the conference when Commissioner Wayne Duke said that only two of the teams named for bowls this year have records better than or equal to Michigan with a 10-1 record.

He said Michigan State, at 7-1, has a better record than seven bowl teams, Wisconsin, with a 7-4 record, has a better record than five bowl teams, and Illinois, 6-4-1, has a better record than four bowl teams.

Under the new Rose Bowl selection format, Ohio State still would have been named for the bowl this year as the winner of its game with Michigan. The two teams tied for the championship but the Buckeyes won a 12-10 decision in their meeting.

However, last year when Ohio State was voted into the bowl by the athletic directors, Michigan would have received the bowl nod under the newly adopted format as co-champoion of the conference.

Ohio State, after its tie game with Michigan, would have been eliminated because of more recent participation in the bowl.

The conference also approved revised plans for selection of teams to the NCAA basketball tournament to eliminate a playoff if the tournament will take two Big Ten teams.

Should only one team be eligible for the tournament, there would be a playoff in case of a co-championship. Should there be two teams in the tournament, there would be no playoff and the assignment of sites for games would be determined by a formula involving season records.

The conference still could send teams to the National Invitational Tournament and will sent a team to the Commissioners' Tournament.

The conference also approved extenstion of its hardship rule giving eligibility to injured athletes, changes in the date of letters of intent for grants in aid, and a tougher normalprogress rule to assure graduation of more athletes.

LSE Rated Swimming Favorite

By Chuck Sinclair
Prep Sports Writer

Anytime a high school swim coach can't tell you off the top of his head how many returning lettermen he has, he's in a position most others only dream of.

Southeast swim coach Steve Nootz finds himself in just such a position this season with 12 lettermen returning and the other Capital City coaches agree that he may have a powerhouse on his hands.

"I look for Steve to have quite a powerhouse this year," said first-year Northeast head coach Robb Wennstedt. "He's got a bunch of kids returning."

"We'll be competitive," Lincoln High coach Gene Cotter noted, "but Southeast will be the toughest. They've got some real good talent returning."

"I would say in the state, Southeast has got it this year," added East High coach Dennis Vokolek. "Steve's going to have a barnburner out there.

According to Nootz, the end result of these observations rests on two very important points. First, the kids have to stay healthy.

Last year going into state, Southeast was picked as the team to beat when the flu hit them hard. The sickness and some finishes not up to potential may have cost the Knights the state title according to Nootz.

Second, the kids have got to want to win it. "Actually," Nootz said, "it just depends on how hard the kids want it and how hard they're willing to work for it."

Nootz pointed to East and Lincoln High as state contenders with the return of outstanding individuals.

Southeast is built around the return of Eddie Johnson, a swimmer who Nootz says has the potential to break any state record in any event except the distance freestyle and backstroke.

Johnson is the defending state champion in both the 200-IM and 100-butterfly and also swam on a championship relay team.

But as a strong suit, Nootz looks to the diving event for power. Returning is Tom Weyrauch, third in the state last year and expected to be near the top again this season.

Greg Rutford
East Swimmer

Eddie Johnson
Southeast Swimmer

Along with Tom is his younger brother Jim, a sophomore who doubles as a diver and swimmer. "I look for Tom and Jim to both battle for the diving title at state this year," Nootz said. "And we have three kids fighting for the other two spots who will help us out quite a bit."

Nootz was careful about proclaiming his Knights as the team to beat this year but said, "This is the best senior class I've ever had and if we're ever going to win it, I guess this would have to be the year. We're stronger this year, but not quite in as good condition. But we started three weeks later this year."

Lincoln High returns some top individuals, but according to Cotter, doesn't have the numbers to keep up with the likes of Southeast.

The Links have six returning lettermen on the 18-man squad led by senior Dave McCleery, who placed high in state and owns the school record in the 50-freestyle.

Like Southeast, Cotter also has a returning diver to challenge for a state title. Bob Rothwell finished fourth in diving last year and Cotter thinks that because of gymnastic training, he should be one of the best this year.

Rothwell was an all-city selection on the trampoline the past two years.

East High coach Vokolek has perhaps the biggest rebuilding job with only two lettermen returning. But a group of promising sophomores could bring the Spartans into statewide contention by the season's end.

East is led by seniors Greg Rutford and Pete Allman. Rutford is the defending state champion in the 200-freestyle and second in the distance freestyle. Allman is another promising diver.

"Greg is our blue-chipper," Vokolek noted. "He's successfully won the Lambert Trophy two years straight in the summer Great Plains meet."

Going into the year with a sophomore dominated team may be tough for the first part of the season according to Vokolek, but he expects his youth to gel by state meet time.

Wennstedt, in his first year, inherited only six lettermen but he thinks they can be tough with a little work.

Leading the Northeast squad are Tom DelGado and Bruce Sandahl in the butterfly and sprint events respectively. Northeast also has a promising junior diver, Mike Nelson, who can be pretty tough once he gets a few basics down Wennstedt noted.

"Being new to the area," Wennstedt said, "I'm not too sure what the talent is like but I would like to see a Lincoln team end Westside's reign of state titles."

The Omaha school has won the title five years in a row.

LSE Rated Swimming Favorite

By Chuck Sinclair
Prep Sports Writer

Anytime a high school swim coach can't tell you off the top of his head how many returning lettermen he has, he's in a position most others only dream of.

Southeast swim coach Steve Nootz finds himself in just such a position this season with 12 lettermen returning and the other Capital City coaches agree that he may have a powerhouse on his hands.

"I look for Steve to have quite a powerhouse this year," said first-year Northeast head coach Robb Wennstedt. "He's got a bunch of kids returning."

"We'll be competitive," Lincoln High coach Gene Cotter noted, "but Southeast will be the toughest. They've got some real good talent returning."

"I would say in the state, Southeast has got it this year," added East High coach Dennis Vokolek. "Steve's going to have a barnburner out there.

According to Nootz, the end result of these observations rests on two very important points. First, the kids have to stay healthy.

Last year going into state, Southeast was picked as the team to beat when the flu hit them hard. The sickness and some finishes not up to potential may have cost the Knights the state title according to Nootz.

Second, the kids have got to want to win it. "Actually," Nootz said, "it just depends on how hard the kids want it and how hard they're willing to work for it."

Nootz pointed to East and Lincoln High as state contenders with the return of outstanding individuals.

Southeast is built around the return of Eddie Johnson, a swimmer who Nootz says has the potential to break any state record in any event except the distance freestyle and backstroke.

Johnson is the defending state champion in both the 200-IM and 100-butterfly and also swam on a championship relay team.

But as a strong suit, Nootz looks to the diving event for power. Returning is Tom Weyrauch, third in the state last year and expected to be near the top again this season.

Greg Rutford
East Swimmer

Eddie Johnson
Southeast Swimmer

Along with Tom is his younger brother Jim, a sophomore who doubles as a diver and swimmer. "I look for Tom and Jim to both battle for the diving title at state this year," Nootz said. "And we have three kids fighting for the other two spots who will help us out quite a bit."

Nootz was careful about proclaiming his Knights as the team to beat this year but said, "This is the best senior class I've ever had and if we're ever going to win it, I guess this would have to be the year. We're stronger this year, but not quite in as good condition. But we started three weeks later this year."

Lincoln High returns some top individuals, but according to Cotter, doesn't have the numbers to keep up with the likes of Southeast.

The Links have six returning lettermen on the 18-man squad led by senior Dave McCleery, who placed high in state and owns the school record in the 50-freestyle.

Like Southeast, Cotter also has a returning diver to challenge for a state title. Bob Rothwell finished fourth in diving last year and Cotter thinks that because of gymnastic training, he should be one of the best this year.

Rothwell was an all-city selection on the trampoline the past two years.

East High coach Vokolek has perhaps the biggest rebuilding job with only two lettermen returning. But a group of promising sophomores could bring the Spartans into statewide contention by the season's end.

East is led by seniors Greg Rutford and Pete Allman. Rutford is the defending state champion in the 200-freestyle and second in the distance freestyle. Allman is another promising diver.

"Greg is our blue-chipper," Vokolek noted. "He's successfully won the Lambert Trophy two years straight in the summer Great Plains meet."

Going into the year with a sophomore dominated team may be tough for the first part of the season according to Vokolek, but he expects his youth to gel by state meet time.

Wennstedt, in his first year, inherited only six lettermen but he thinks they can be tough with a little work.

Leading the Northeast squad are Tom DelGado and Bruce Sandahl in the butterfly and sprint events respectively. Northeast also has a promising junior diver, Mike Nelson, who can be pretty tough once he gets a few basics down Wennstedt noted.

"Being new to the area," Wennstedt said, "I'm not too sure what the talent is like but I would like to see a Lincoln team end Westside's reign of state titles."

The Omaha school has won the title five years in a row.

It's All Outdoors

By Tom Vint
Outdoor Editor

It's all over Sunday. The eastern half of Nebraska will close to waterfowl hunters.

Frustrating wasn't it.

At the beginning, waterfowlers from Omaha to Scottsbluff twiddled their thumbs in anticipation of the big flights of northern ducks expected after record spring hatch figures were reported in Canada.

Come Dec. 8, the closing date, the majority of hunters will still be twiddling their thumbs. Warm weather up north held the birds in Canada, North Dakota and elsewhere during the early season.

Nebraska hunters held their breath for a sudden cold snap to push the migrating millions south. Well, it happened. The predicatably unpredictable weather kicked Nebraska waterfowlers in the nose again.

When the push finally began up north, the cold snap froze what little water remained in North Dakota, South Dakota and Nebraska. Only the big reservoirs held ducks and geese and no one was able to push them off.

So the birds went straight through, bypassing eastern Nebraska. Only a scattered few touched down to whet their appetites of would-be waterfowlers So long duck dinner. Goodbye grandiose geese.

The Nebraska Game and Parks Commission even tried to apply for an extension of its waterfowl season. The request was turned down by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, but it wouldn't have done any good anyway.

Even the riverways snaking through the state proved less than ideal this year for waterfowling. Some ducks stayed on the Lake McConaughy reserve but not enough to excite hunters to a drool.

Western Ducks Still Game

The Western Nebraska hunters, however, will have a few more days to make things better. The second half of the split season opens Dec. 14 and ends Jan. 3 to allow a few more big northern mallards to find their way to the roasting pots. That won't be much of a consolation for the rest of the duck hunters around, though.

Goose season which ends statewide Sunday, was a little better. Blue and snow geese moved through Nebraska Early, permitting excellent hunts the first week or two of the season. Since then, however, geese have been like ducks — success stories are a rarity.

Not only has duck hunting been slow, outdoor activity as a whole has been at a near standstill for the past week or two. Ken Bouc, compiler of Nebraska Game and Parks Commission's weekly outdoor report, said there wasn't enough going on to put together two completed paragraphs of outdoor activity.

It's hard to expand on two words — "Nothin' doin'."

Pheasant and quail hunters report spotty success around the state. Archery deer hunters might have the best chance of doing the family table any good via the wild game route.

Fall fishing is also mediocre to poor, according to North Platte fishery biologists. The trout run of rainbows in the fall has been slow. The striped bass, terrors a few short weeks ago, have slackened on the feed belt.

Even the snow failed to stay aroung long enough to provide hunters with a helping hand for cottontail hunting. It's been one of those year's for the hunting outdoorsmen.

Golfers Elect New Officers

The Lincoln Municipal Golfers Association elected Joe Wachter president at a Tuesday night meeting.

Other officers elected include Daryl VandeHoef, vice president; Wayne Dunkel, secretary-treasurer; Mike Ley tournament chairman; Lloyd Sloan, scorer; Gary Shields, special events chairman; Duaane Nelson, program chairman; Al Peithman, membership chairman; Jack Fogerty, Trophies and prizes; Rod Little, publicity chairman; and Otto Benner, handicap.

LSE, LNE Coaching Friends To Meet Friday

During the off-season, basketball coaches Ed Johnson of Lincoln Northeast and Wally McNaught of Lincoln Southeast are best of friends.

They're golfing buddies. They see each other quite often.

In 1974's first intra-city basketball game Friday night, Johnson and McNaught's friendship will freeze for a couple of hours.

They'll be concentrating on the task at hand — matching coaching strategies as the Rockets and Knights collide at Pershing Auditorium.

It ranks as one of the state's best season-opening matchups. Northeast is ranked No. 5 in the Sunday Journal and Star's preseason Class A ratings.

Southeast owns the No. 6 preseason ranking. The Knights, however, must play in December without the services of returning forward starter Fred Schmid.

Schmid broke his right hand in practice last week and will be sidelined until January. McNaught had counted heavily on Schmid's outside shooting ability.

Northeast's Johnson will open with an all-senior lineup, but he has solid bench strength, including four talented sophomores. They could be called on early if the situation warrants it.

"We haven't been able to cover everything we should," admits Johnson. "There's no way we're going to get those things covered. We'll just hope for the best."

Holdrege is a Class B team facing a formidable twin challenge on opening week.

Coach Dan Arnold's Dusters play at Omaha Holy Name Friday night and at Boys Town Saturday night. Holdrege will come back next week against Class A York and also meet Gothenburg and McCook before Christmas.

Arnold's charges face a rugged challenge in a holiday tournament at Kearney State College, too. Holdrege joins Fairbury from the Class B ranks in the 4-team tournament against Class A Kearney and Grand Island.

Arnold believes in a quality schedule and upgraded competion. "That's what makes good basketball players," he has said.

Holdrege, tabbed the No. 2 Southwest Conference team behind Cozad in a coaches' preseason poll, gained the No. 2 perch in the Sunday Journal and Star's Class B pre-season top 10.

In games involving Lincoln teams this weekend, it's:

Lincoln Southeast v. Lincoln Northeast, Friday night, Pershing Auditorium — The Knights command a slight early-season edge. That is, if Southeast's front line complements what appears to be superior guard play.

Hastings v. Lincoln High, Friday night, Johnson Gym — The Links have no one comparable to the Tigers' Mark McVicker or Doug Phelps. If they win, hustle will have to do the job.

Lincoln Pius X at Milford, Friday night — Milford fans will pack the gym early to get a glance at the defending state Class B champions. Milford has four returning starters and will be primed for a big upset.

Lincoln East at Bellevue, Saturday night — The Spartans easily handled Bellevue in the state Class A tournament semifinals last March. Bellevue returns two of its top three scorers. It's tabbed one of the Metro's top four teams. East is considered Lincoln's best. Should be a first-rate matchup.

Lincoln High at Omaha Westside, Saturday night — Westside is the Metro's American division pre-season favorite. The Links will have trouble defending the Warriors' 6-7 Hughes Wilcox.

EPA: AEC Estimate Of Atomic Risk Low

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency said Wednesday a serious atomic power plant accident could expose the public to health risks 10 times as high as estimated by the Atomic Energy Commission.

And EPA also said the AEC's proposal to let the atomic power industry use recycled plutonium appears "at best . . . marginally acceptable from a cost-benefit balance" and leaves too many unanswered questions.

In separate comments on both issues, the EPA praised the AEC's efforts to assess the potential advantages and hazards of the atomic programs, but it urged the AEC to improve on its efforts so far.

One major AEC study was the "Rasmussen Report" issued last Aug. 21, which estimated that a serious reactor accident might cause perhaps 93 deaths and 200 illnesses — far lower than the estimate of 3,400 deaths and 43,000 illnesses presented by a 1967 report known as "WASH-740."

But the EPA, reviewing the Rasmussen Report, said the ste ayvunresimaed the health effects of escaped radiation and appeared too optimistic about the chances of evacuating large populations from the surroundings of a serious atomic power plant mishap.

As a result, the EPA said, the Rasmussen Report's estimate of the risks may be one-tenth of what it really is. But the EPA did not offer its own estimates.

The EPA commented separately on an AEC "environmental impact statement" on plans to let the power industry use plutonium, recovered from spent atomic fuel, as the active element in new fuel rods.

The EPA said it has "environmental reservations" about the project and felt the AEC statement contained insufficient information for the EPA to decide whether the use of plutonium is environmentally acceptable.

U.N. Recognition Of PLO Caused Attacks—Envoy

United Nations (UPI) — Israeli Ambassador Yosef Tekoah said U.N. recognition of the Palestine Liberation Organization encouraged stepped up "terror attacks against innocent Israeli civilians."

In a letter to Sec. Gen. Kurt Waldheim, Tekoah cited attacks last week across the Lebanese border near kibbutz Dan and Rihaniya in Israel.

"It is evident that the recent General Assembly resolutions, which yielded to the demands of the PLO, have encouraged the campaign of terror attacks against innocent Israeli civilians," he said.

Postal Embargo To France Ends

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service lifted on Wednesday the embargo on mail to France stemming from a strike by French postal workers.

The Postal Service said French authorities reported the backlog of mail resulting from the strike is being cleared, but that some delays will continue, especially from airmail outbound from France.

The embargo went into effect Oct. 29.

EPA: AEC Estimate Of Atomic Risk Low

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency said Wednesday a serious atomic power plant accident could expose the public to health risks 10 times as high as estimated by the Atomic Energy Commission.

And EPA also said the AEC's proposal to let the atomic power industry use recycled plutonium appears "at best . . . marginally acceptable from a cost-benefit balance" and leaves too many unanswered questions.

In separate comments on both issues, the EPA praised the AEC's efforts to assess the potential advantages and hazards of the atomic programs, but it urged the AEC to improve on its efforts so far.

One major AEC study was the "Rasmussen Report" issued last Aug. 21, which estimated that a serious reactor accident might cause perhaps 93 deaths and 200 illnesses — far lower than the estimate of 3,400 deaths and 43,000 illnesses presented by a 1957 report known as "WASH-740."

But the EPA, reviewing the Rasmussen Report, said the ste ayvunresimaed the health effects of escaped radiation and appeared too optimistic about the chances of evacuating large populations from the surroundings of a serious atomic power plant mishap.

As a result, the EPA said, the Rasmussen Report's estimate of the risks may be one-tenth of what it really is. But the EPA did not offer its own estimates.

The EPA commented separately on an AEC "environmental impact statement" on plans to let the power industry use plutonium, recovered from spent atomic fuel, as the active element in new fuel rods.

The EPA said it has "environmental reservations" about the project and felt the AEC statement contained insufficient information for the EPA to decide whether the use of plutonium is environmentally acceptable.

U.N. Recognition Of PLO Caused Attacks—Envoy

United Nations (UPI) — Israeli Ambassador Yosef Tekoah said U.N. recognition of the Palestine Liberation Organization encouraged stepped up "terror attacks against innocent Israeli civilians."

In a letter to Sec. Gen. Kurt Waldheim, Tekoah cited attacks last week across the Lebanese border near kibbutz Dan and Rihaniya in Israel.

"It is evident that the recent General Assembly resolutions, which yielded to the demands of the PLO, have encouraged the campaign of terror attacks against innocent Israeli civilians," he said.

Postal Embargo To France Ends

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service lifted on Wednesday the embargo on mail to France stemming from a strike by French postal workers.

The Postal Service said French authorities reported the backlog of mail resulting from the strike is being cleared, but that some delays will continue, especially from airmail outbound from France.

The embargo went into effect Oct. 29.

Authorities Say McCue Shot Wife, Then Himself

Authorities have ruled that Barton McCue shot his wife, Martha, in the face with a .20 gauge shotgun and then committed suicide by shooting himself in the mouth with the same weapon.

Martha McCue, 38, was found dead in the hallway of her home at 5524 Cooper. Barton McCue was found lying in a bedroom and was taken to Bryan Memorial Hospital, where he died.

The couple was found by Connie Davidson, 15, Mrs. McCue's daughter, about 5 a.m. Wednesday when she got out of bed to answer a telephone. The girl was not awakened by the shots, police said.

The McCues were in the process of getting a divorce, officials said. McCue was staying at the Russian Inn, according to police.

Police said McCue apparently hid himself in the basement of the home at 5512 Cooper after getting a ride to the home with an acquaintance. A sleeping bag, water and an apple were found behind a furnace in the basement of the home.

McCue had been charged with assaulting his wife in connection with an incident Sept. 1 in which he allegedly threatened her with a .38-caliber revolver. McCue pleaded innocent to the charge.

Third City Man Shoots Himself To Avoid Returning To Prison

Grand Island (UPI) — A 32-year old Grand Island man, apparently disturbed about the possibility of returning to jail, died Wednesday of self-inflicted gunshot wounds.

The victim, Donald Breaker, was scheduled for a preliminary hearing Wednesday in connection with a traffic offense some three weeks ago.

Hall County Deputy Atty. Steve Potter said Breaker indicated in a note found in the residence where he was shot saying he did not wish to return to jail.

Breaker recently completed a one-year sentence in the State Penal Complex on an unlawful flight charge.

Authorities said Breaker's body was discovered by his father, Willard, and Deborah Burkhardt after Miss Burkhardt had sought out the father because the younger Breaker seemed depressed.

They found him in the basement with a .38 caliber bullet wound in the chest.

Kidnaped Child Asks Officers Kill Abductors

MILAN, Italy (AP) — An 11-year-old girl kidnaped 18 days ago was freed barefoot and coatless in freezing darkness Wednesday, and told police if they caught her abductors to "please kill them."

The child's father, a diamond dealer, would not say how much ransom he paid, but previous reports said the kidnapers demanded $1.5 million.

Nicoletta di Nardi was the first girl kidnaped in Italy's wave of abductions. She was freed in the village of Lambrugo, near Milan. The kidnapers grabbed her in Milan on Nov. 16 as she walked to school.

Kimball Crash Fatal To Man

Kimball (AP) — A Cheyenne, Wyo. construction worker was killed late Wednesday afternoon in a one-vehicle accident on the west edge of Kimball.

Officials identified the victim as Aulton Crockett, 56. He had been working in the Kimball area for sometime with a construction firm.

Officials said he was driving a pickup truck and was killed when he apparently lost control.

Authorities Say McCue Shot Wife, Then Himself

Authorities have ruled that Barton McCue shot his wife, Martha, in the face with a .20 gauge shotgun and then committed suicide by shooting himself in the mouth with the same weapon.

Martha McCue, 38, was found dead in the hallway of her home at 5524 Cooper. Barton McCue was found lying in a bedroom and was taken to Bryan Memorial Hospital, where he died.

The couple was found by Connie Davidson, 15, Mrs. McCue's daughter, about 5 a.m. Wednesday when she got out of bed to answer a telephone. The girl was not awakened by the shots, police said.

The McCues were in the process of getting a divorce, officials said. McCue was staying at the Russian Inn, according to police.

Police said McCue apparently hid himself in the basement of the home at 5512 Cooper after getting a ride to the home with an acquaintance. A sleeping bag, water and an apple were found behind a furnace in the basement of the home.

McCue had been charged with assaulting his wife in connection with an incident Sept. 1 in which he allegedly threatened her with a .38-caliber revolver. McCue pleaded innocent to the charge.

Commission Revokes Gibbon Man's License

By The Associated Press

The Nebraska Real Estate Commission has revoked the appraiser's license of a Gibbon man who was convicted earlier this year of illegally transporting stolen securities.

The commission took the license of Ronald E. Bycroft, who was convicted last Arpil 3 of transporting stolen securities, valued at about $16,000, from Gibbon to Denver.

Earlier this year, the board revoked Bycroft's license as a broker.

The board also has suspended the broker's license of Gordon S. Morrow of Kearney for 60 days. Morrow had failed to deliver an offer to buy or a completed purchase agreement for, a duplex in Kearney within "a reasonable amount of time."

The board censured Carroll S. Morrow and the Morrow Insurance and Real Estate Co. in the same action.

A complaint against Ball Real Estate Co. of Kearney, and real estate salesman Tom McCarty, was dismissed. That complaint stemmed from the Morrow case.

Sale Of KLMS Revealed

Completion of the sale of Lincoln radio station KLMS to Telegraph-Herald, Inc., of Dubuque, Iowa, was announced Tuesday in Lincoln by Robert Woodward Jr., vice-president of the Iowa Firm.

Approval of the sale was granted Oct. 9 by the Federal Communications Commission. No major policy or personnel changes are planned at KLMS with the transfer of station ownership, according to Woodward. The station's 24-hour contemporary music format will be continued, he said.

The Lincoln radio station had been founded in 1949 by Howard Shuman of Lincoln, president of Lincoln Broadcasting and the station's former owner.

The general manager at KLMS will be Harley Lampman, according to Woodward. Lampman was formerly sales manager for radio station KDTH, a Telegraph-Herald property in Dubuque.

The Iowa firm also owns the Dubuque Telegraph-Herald newspaper; TelGraphics, a commercial printing company in East Dubuque, Ill.; radio station KFMD in Dubuque; and station WGEZ in Beloit, Wis.

Music news is covered thoroughly in the "Sunday Journal and Star."

Stock Mart Closes Mixed

New York (AP) — The stock market finished mixed Wednesday in an erratic session that saw investors swayed by recession worries on the one hand and bargain-hunting opportunities and optimism for an end to the coal strike on the other.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials finished below the 600 mark for the second straight session, closing up 2.03 at 598.64. Tuesday's close of 596.61 was the Dow's lowest since Oct. 4, when it hit a 12-year low of 584.56. Declines narrowly outpaced advances 675 to 621 among the 1,786 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume dropped to 12 58 million shares from 13.62 million shares in the previous session.

In midafternoon the Dow had climbed over the 600 mark on the strength of reports that coal miners had ratified a new contract and would end their nationwide strike.

But brokers said recession worries that have plagued the market for some time prevented an over-all gain for the day.

"People realize the Ford administration now has to direct its attention to recession more than to inflation," said Ralph Acampora of Harris, Upham & Co. "That has not become evident yet."

Fairmont Foods was the Big Board volume leader, up ¼ at 6½, after a block of 295,300 shares traded at 6½.

General Motors lost ⅛ to 29½. The giant automaker said Wednesday that November sales were almost 34 per cent below a year ago.

Gold stocks recovered some of the ground they lost Tuesday after the Treasury Department announced it would sell two million ounces of gold at public auction Jan. 6.

Homestake Mining was up 2⅝ to 43⅝; ASA, Ltd., rose 3½ to 70⅝; and Campbell Red Lake Mines gained 1⅞ to 30¾.

Alcoa closed off 2¾ to 27⅛. A block of 40,300 shares traded off 3 at 26⅞.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks inched up .09 to 35.74.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market-value index finished off .22 to 61.37.

Universal resources was the most-active Amex issue, off at 3½. A block of 74,300 shares traded at 3.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market closed down .09 at 60.41.

Commodity Losses Sharp

Chicago (AP) — A combination of liquidation, stop-loss selling and scarcity of buyers produced sharp losses in farm commodity futures on the Chicago Board of Trade Wednesday.

There were several limit declines. They included soybeans at 20 cents a bushel, one corn option down the limit of 10 cents, soybean oil down 100 points, or 1 cent a pound, and one oats option down the limit of 6 cents.

Wheat futures declined 10 cents a bushel and soybean meal lost $7 a ton. Iced broilers eased nearly 1 cent a pound, similar to drops in red meat futures.

Hog Mart Stabilizes

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Hog marketings on the Omaha livestock market leveled off at 6,500 head Wednesday, and prices stabilized after drops both Monday and Tuesday.

Barrows and gilts trended fully steady, with a butcher top of $39.50. Bulk sales ranged from $39.25-$39.50.

Sows managed a steady to 25-cents higher rating, except on some late sales on offerings over 500 pounds, which went 25cents lower. The trade range was $32.75-$34.00.

Cattle marketings also diminished, and prices did a turnabout.

Steers and heifers traded 50-cents to $1.00 higher, with most of the advance on steers. Many loads of choice animals went the full advance.

While steers and heifers looked good, cows, which had been riding high for the past 1½ weeks, took a jolt, trading unevenly 50-cents to $1.50 lower, some late sales from $1.50-$2.00 off.

Shorn lambs, like the cows, had been riding an upswing, but Wednesday's trend was 50cents to mostly 75-cents lower. Wooled lambs were steady, and there was but a small supply of ewes.

Commission Revokes Gibbon Man's License

By The Associated Press

The Nebraska Real Estate Commission has revoked the appraiser's license of a Gibbon man who was convicted earlier this year of illegally transporting stolen securities.

The commission took the license of Ronald E. Bycroft, who was convicted last Arpil 3 of transporting stolen securities, valued at about $16,000, from Gibbon to Denver.

Earlier this year, the board revoked Bycroft's license as a broker.

The board also has suspended the broker's license of Gordon S. Morrow of Kearney for 60 days. Morrow had failed to deliver an offer to buy or a completed purchase agreement for, a duplex in Kearney within "a reasonable amount of time."

The board censured Carroll S. Morrow and the Morrow Insurance and Real Estate Co. in the same action.

A complaint against Ball Real Estate Co. of Kearney, and real estate salesman Tom McCarty, was dismissed. That complaint stemmed from the Morrow case.

Sale Of KLMS Revealed

Completion of the sale of Lincoln radio station KLMS to Telegraph-Herald, Inc., of Dubuque, Iowa, was announced Tuesday in Lincoln by Robert Woodward Jr., vice-president of the Iowa Firm.

Approval of the sale was granted Oct. 9 by the Federal Communications Commission. No major policy or personnel changes are planned at KLMS with the transfer of station ownership, according to Woodward. The station's 24-hour contemporary music format will be continued, he said.

The Lincoln radio station had been founded in 1949 by Howard Shuman of Lincoln, president of Lincoln Broadcasting and the station's former owner.

The general manager at KLMS will be Harley Lampman, according to Woodward. Lampman was formerly sales manager for radio station KDTH, a Telegraph-Herald property in Dubuque.

The Iowa firm also owns the Dubuque Telegraph-Herald newspaper; TelGraphics, a commercial printing company in East Dubuque, Ill.; radio station KFMD in Dubuque; and station WGEZ in Beloit, Wis.

Music news is covered thoroughly in the "Sunday Journal and Star."

Stock Mart Closes Mixed

New York (AP) — The stock market finished mixed Wednesday in an erratic session that saw investors swayed by recession worries on the one hand and bargain-hunting opportunities and optimism for an end to the coal strike on the other.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials finished below the 600 mark for the second straight session, closing up 2.03 at 598.64. Tuesday's close of 596.61 was the Dow's lowest since Oct. 4, when it hit a 12-year low of 584.56. Declines narrowly outpaced advances 675 to 621 among the 1,786 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume dropped to 12.58 million shares from 13.62 million shares in the previous session.

In midafternoon the Dow had climbed over the 600 mark on the strength of reports that coal miners had ratified a new contract and would end their nationwide strike.

But brokers said recession worries that have plagued the market for some time prevented an over-all gain for the day.

"People realize the Ford administration now has to direct its attention to recession more than to inflation," said Ralph Acampora of Harris, Upham & Co. "That has not become evident yet."

Fairmont Foods was the Big Board volume leader, up ¼ at 6½, after a block of 295,300 shares traded at 6½.

General Motors lost ⅛ to 29½. The giant automaker said Wednesday that November sales were almost 34 per cent below a year ago.

Gold stocks recovered some of the ground they lost Tuesday after the Treasury Department announced it would sell two million ounces of gold at public auction Jan. 6.

Homestake Mining was up 2⅝ to 43⅝; ASA, Ltd., rose 3½ to 70⅝; and Campbell Red Lake Mines gained 1⅞ to 30¾.

Alcoa closed off 2¾ to 27⅛. A block of 40,300 shares traded off 3 at 26⅞.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks inched up .09 to 35.74.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market-value index finished off .22 to 61.37.

Universal resources was the most-active Amex issue, off at 3½. A block of 74,300 shares traded at 3.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market closed down .09 at 60.41.

Commodity Losses Sharp

Chicago (AP) — A combination of liquidation, stop-loss selling and scarcity of buyers produced sharp losses in farm commodity futures on the Chicago Board of Trade Wednesday.

There were several limit declines. They included soybeans at 20 cents a bushel, one corn option down the limit of 10 cents, soybean oil down 100 points, or 1 cent a pound, and one oats option down the limit of 6 cents.

Wheat futures declined 10 cents a bushel and soybean meal lost $7 a ton. Iced broilers eased nearly 1 cent a pound, similar to drops in red meat futures.
